

Zodiac Tarot App

Card Data Model — Complete Reference Document

This is the definitive, standalone reference for the structured data underlying the Zodiac Tarot app: the 78-card deck's identity, symbols, keywords, guidebook text, reversed-card interpretation, birth card lookup, curriculum structure, and account/social systems. It's written for a technical reader comfortable with spreadsheets and databases, but who doesn't need formal schema terminology.

This document covers two layers, built in two different threads. The tarot content layer (Sections 2-12) is the deck itself. The app/curriculum layer (Sections 13-15) is how that content becomes lessons, units, and accounts - built afterward, on top of the content layer, reading from it by column name rather than duplicating it.

Companion files: zodiac_tarot.db (all tables, images embedded as BLOBs) and "Script to extract the images from DB.py" (pulls images back out to files). See Section 16.

1. The big picture

The data is organized as flat tables (think: spreadsheet tabs), each focused on one kind of information. Every card has a unique ID, card_key (e.g. major_00_fool), which ties tables together. Curriculum tables add two more keys: unit_number and node_id.

Tarot content layer

Table	Rows	What it is
2. Card Base List	78	Card identity + image filename.
3. Major Arcana Symbols	22	Planet/sign glyph per Major card.
4. Minor Arcana Attributes	56	Glyphs/banner text per Minor card.
5. Card Keywords	307	Keywords, one per row.
6. Card Talking Points	345	Reading notes, one per row.
7. Symbol Significance	137	Planet/sign/element/suit glossary.
8. Card Descriptions	78	Verbatim, condensed, reversed, and anonymized text per card.
9. Symbol Images	30	Symbol name -> icon filename.
10. Birth Card Lookup	21	Birth-number -> Major Arcana card.
11. Card Similarity	6,006	Pairwise similarity for lesson difficulty.
12. Teaching Order	78	Curriculum sequence, easiest to hardest.

App / curriculum layer (from the design thread)

Table	Rows	What it is
13. Unit Metadata	10	One row per curriculum unit.
14. Curriculum Nodes	577	One row per playable lesson node.
15. Account & Social (Meta Systems)	0 + 78	users (schema only) + avatar_sources (78 rows).

Two more tables exist only inside the database, not as their own CSV: Card Images (every card's artwork embedded as a BLOB) and the image data embedded directly inside avatar_sources and symbol_images. This makes the database a single, fully self-contained file.

An important design boundary, held throughout

Tables 2-4 contain only what's physically printed on a card face. Interpreted meaning lives separately, in Tables 5-8. Runtime data (accounts, progress) is never mixed with authored content - Section 15's users table ships with zero rows, since it's populated by the app, not by this data-building process.

2. Card Base List

File: `data_tarot_cards_base.csv` | 78 rows | 1 row per card

Column	Meaning
card_key	Unique ID, e.g. major_04_emperor or minor_wands_02.
arcana_type	"major" or "minor".
suit	Wands/Cups/Swords/Pentacles for Minor Arcana; blank for Major Arcana.
rank	0-21 for Major Arcana; Ace/2-10/Page/Knight/Queen/King for Minor Arcana.
card_name	Full printed name.
image_file	Card artwork filename, e.g. major_00_fool_MASTER.png.

Full data: Appendix A.

3. Major Arcana Symbols

File: `data_major_arcana_symbols.csv` | 22 rows | 1 row per Major card

Every Major Arcana card shows exactly one astrological glyph: a planet or a zodiac sign, confirmed both from the guidebook and by visual inspection of the artwork.

Column	Meaning
symbol_type	"Planet" or "Zodiac Sign".
symbol	The specific name, e.g. "Mercury" or "Aries". Matches symbol_name in Symbol Significance/Images.

10 Planet cards, 12 Zodiac Sign cards. Full data: Appendix B.

4. Minor Arcana Attributes

File: `data_minor_arcana_attributes.csv` | 56 rows | 1 row per Minor card

- Aces (4): three zodiac glyphs - the signs sharing the suit's element.
- Numbered 2-10 (36): a planet glyph and a zodiac sign glyph.
- Court cards (16): two element glyphs - the figure's element and the suit's element.

Glyph pattern confirmed by direct inspection of 5 of 56 images, applied to the rest via the guidebook's stated planet/sign list. Full data: Appendix C.

5. Card Keywords

File: `data_card_keywords.csv` | 307 rows | multiple rows per card

One row per keyword. source is "guidebook" or "proposed" (2 cards - Queen of Cups, Ace of Swords - have no guidebook keyword line and were authored to fill the gap). Full data: Appendix D.

6. Card Talking Points

File: `data_card_talking_points.csv` | 345 rows | multiple rows per card

Longer-form reading notes, one per row. Full 78-card coverage, no gaps. Full data: Appendix E.

7. Symbol Significance (glossary)

File: `data_symbol_significance.csv` | 137 rows | multiple rows per symbol

A standalone glossary of what each Planet/Sign/Element/Modality/Suit means on its own, independent of any one card. Full data: Appendix F.

8. Card Descriptions

File: `data_card_descriptions.csv` | 78 rows | 1 row per card

Column	Meaning
<code>astrological_label</code>	Heading under the card title, e.g. "URANUS" or "MARS IN ARIES, FIRST DECAN".
<code>description_text</code>	Full guidebook description, verbatim.
<code>description_condensed</code>	Rewritten for a mobile screen without scrolling (54-74 words).
<code>condensed_word_count</code>	Word count of <code>description_condensed</code> .
<code>reversed_reading_notes</code>	Short phrase (8-15 words) translating upright meaning into blocked/shadow form.
<code>description_anonymized</code>	<code>description_condensed</code> with every identity tell removed (own name, own glyphs, rank number, other-card comparisons) - for "is this an accurate description?" lessons.

Provenance: description_text/condensed trace to the guidebook. reversed_reading_notes and description_anonymized are both authored, not guidebook-sourced - the guidebook has zero reversed material, and description_anonymized was leak-checked against every card's own name/glyphs/suit.

Full data: Appendix G.

9. Symbol Images

File: `data_symbol_images.csv` | 30 rows | 1 row per symbol icon

Every Planet/Sign/Element had a dedicated icon already; the 4 Suits did not, so 4 were generated to match the deck's gold line-art style. Full data: Appendix H.

10. Birth Card Lookup

File: `data_birth_card_lookup.csv` | 21 rows

Maps a birth date, reduced to 1-21 (see Section 17.3), to its Major Arcana card. The Fool (0) is intentionally absent - the calculation never produces 0. Full data: Appendix I.

11. Card Similarity (for lesson difficulty)

File: `data_card_similarity.csv` | 6,006 rows | every ordered pair of the 78 cards

Supports lesson formats that show a learner two or more cards and ask them to tell them apart. Each of the 3,003 unique pairs gets a computed similarity score from a one-time authored 6-axis thematic scoring pass (connection/isolation, action/stillness, control/surrender, security/risk, inner/outer, ease/struggle), not from an external source.

Column	Meaning
card_key_a / card_key_b	Both directions stored, so lookup works from either card.
mean_abs_diff	Raw closeness score (0-4 in practice). Lower = more similar.
similarity_score	1/2/3, cut at this deck's real 33rd/67th percentiles (not an even range split).
difficulty_tier	Hard/Medium/Easy spelled out explicitly, since the numbers alone are backwards: LOW similarity_score (1) means confusable, which makes it a HARD lesson question.

Naming history: this column was originally called `difficulty_score` using the same 1/2/3 values, implying 1=easy/3=hard - backwards from what it measures. A design thread hit this confusion directly. Renamed to `similarity_score` with `difficulty_tier` added so it can't recur. Treat scores as a first-draft judgment call - the fix path is hand-editing specific rows, not regenerating from axis scores (which aren't stored anywhere). Full data: not reproduced here (6,006 rows) - see the CSV or database.

12. Teaching Order

File: `data_teaching_order.csv` | 78 rows | 1 row per card

A force-ranked sequence, easiest to hardest, from curriculum design - not derived from `card_similarity`. It reflects teaching decisions (e.g. all four Aces early, court cards as a block) a similarity score alone wouldn't produce. Not meant to be reconciled against `difficulty_tier` - "taught early" and "easy to distinguish" are different questions. Full data: Appendix J.

13. Unit Metadata

File: `data_unit_metadata.csv` | 10 rows | 1 row per curriculum unit

Drives unit-select menus and unit intro screens directly (Zodiac_Tarot_Curriculum_Design_Spec.pdf, used by ZodiacTarot_MainPath_Spec.pdf). This table pre-existed in the project as a design-thread output; it was not previously in the database - added here for the first time.

Column	Meaning
unit_number	1-10. Primary key.
unit_name / unit_tagline / unit_intro_copy	Menu label, one-line hook, intro-screen copy.
section_count / standard_node_count / throwback_node_count / total_node_count	Composition breakdown.
has_unit_recap / has_cumulative_review	Whether this unit ends with a recap and/or triggers review.
card_count / card_keys_covered	Which cards this unit teaches.
major_count / minor_count / dominant_suit	Composition summary.
est_completion_minutes_best_case / _typical / _with_mistakes	Session-length estimates at 60s/90s/150s per node.
unlock_requirement	Gating rule for the unit-select screen.
icon_image_file / menu_order	Menu tile asset and display order.

Full data: Appendix K.

14. Curriculum Nodes

File: `data_curriculum_nodes.csv` | 577 rows | 1 row per playable lesson node

The full play sequence: 10 Units -> 78 Sections -> 577 Nodes, per Zodiac_Tarot_Curriculum_Design_Spec.pdf.

Column	Meaning
global_play_order	True sequential play order across the entire curriculum. Primary key.
unit_number / section_number_global / section_number_in_unit	Position within the curriculum hierarchy.
card_key / card_name / arcana_type	The card this node teaches. Blank for unit_recap/cumulative_review rows, which cover multiple cards.
is_symbol_intro	True if this section introduces a new symbol.
node_number	Order within its section (or unit-level group).
node_type	standard / throwback / unit_recap / cumulative_review.
node_id	Human-readable ID, e.g. U5-S40-N7.
format_code / format_name	Which lesson format to render (A1-A7, B, C) - see Zodiac_Tarot_Lesson_Format_Bible.pdf.
anchor_variant	Which text/asset form anchors the round (e.g. keywords, card_art_to_symbol_name).
node_phase	isolation / near_context / standing_skill / interleave_review / throwback_review / unit_recap / cumulative_review.
cards_involved	Pipe-delimited card_key list. For A1/A2/A4/A5/A7, first key is the target, rest are distractors.
cards_to_recall_count	Number of cards the learner must genuinely recall.

Column	Meaning
distractor_tier	easy / easy_plus_one_known / n/a - confusability tier distractors were drawn from.
notes	Implementation-facing explanation of this node's specific content rule.

This table pre-existed in the project as a design-thread output; it was not previously in the database - added here for the first time, along with unit_metadata. Full 577-row data is not reproduced in this PDF (would run dozens of pages) - see the CSV or database. A short sample is in Appendix L.

15. Account & Social Data (Meta Systems)

Per Spec_Meta_Hygiene_Systems.pdf: account creation, avatar selection, the bottom tab bar, the Friends tab, friend progress markers, and the daily streak. This is the first data ask outside the tarot content layer - the earlier reference to "users, progress, and social systems are a separate effort" in this document's own gap list (Section 19) is what this section now begins to close.

15.1 avatar_sources — new table, real data

File: `data_avatar_sources.csv` | 78 rows | 1 row per card

Column	Meaning
avatar_id	1-78. Primary key.
card_key	Which card this avatar was cropped from. Not in the spec's own column list, added here for provenance/traceability.
image_file	The pre-cropped avatar image filename, e.g. <code>major_00_fool_avatar.png</code> .

Correction to the spec's assumption: Spec_Meta_Hygiene_Systems.pdf describes the asset collection generically as an "avatar_XXX naming pattern (avatar_001.png, avatar_002.png, ...)" and explicitly calls the exact contents "a content/asset task, not a design decision." The real assets, generated by script_make_avatars.py and verified against all 78 files actually present in the project, are named {card_key}_avatar.png instead - one circular crop per tarot card, not a generic sequential set. This table reflects the real filenames, not the spec's placeholder example. The picker itself (drawing 9 at random) works identically either way - only the naming assumption was wrong.

Full data: Appendix M.

15.2 users — new table, schema only

Not a CSV — schema-only, 0 rows, inside `zodiac_tarot.db` only

This is runtime account data, not authored content, so it ships with an empty table rather than a CSV of fake sample rows.

Column	Meaning
user_id	Primary key, auto-incrementing.
username	Unique. Checked live at account creation; permanent - no rename flow exists anywhere in the app.
avatar_id	Foreign key -> <code>avatar_sources</code> . Set once at creation; permanent - no avatar-change flow exists.
created_at	Timestamp. Also the Friends-list sort tiebreaker (earlier account ranks higher on equal progress).
current_streak	Integer, defaults to 0. Incremented/reset per the spec's daily streak logic.
last_completed_date	Device-local date. Drives the once-per-day increment and missed-day reset.

Full data: none - this table has no rows to reproduce. See the database schema directly.

15.3 user_progress — referenced, not designed here

Deliberately not created in this database. Spec_Meta_Hygiene_Systems.pdf is explicit that this table is assumed to exist (for computing path progress % and each friend's current-node marker) but belongs to a different, not-yet-written curriculum/learner-progress spec. Guessing a schema for it here risks conflicting with whatever that spec eventually defines. The one thing known about it: it needs a composite key of (user_id, node_id), where node_id refers to curriculum_nodes.node_id.

Two computed values depend on this table once it exists, per the spec: path progress % (completed rows divided by total nodes across all ten units, from unit_metadata) and friend clustering (which friends share a node - a runtime grouping, not a stored relationship). Neither is a column anywhere - both are computed at read time.

16. Challenge Data

Per Spec_Challenge_Tab.pdf: a head-to-head quiz a learner sends to one friend, built from the same lesson-format vocabulary as the main Path, with hard-fail scoring and a live score-comparison for the receiver. Both players answer an identical, frozen 10-question set, asynchronously - the receiver's question-by-question comparison against the sender's already-recorded answers is the entire point of persisting the question set rather than regenerating it.

16.1 challenges — one row per challenge, in either direction

Not a CSV — schema-only, 0 rows, inside zodiac_tarot.db only

Column	Meaning
challenge_id	Primary key, auto-incrementing.
challenger_user_id / receiver_user_id	Both foreign keys -> users.
difficulty	Easy / Medium / Hard. Drives distractor confusability and grid/board size within whichever format a question uses - not itself a format or content choice.
unit_cap	Integer, nullable. NULL = "All content"; when set, always ≥ 3 , since both players must have cleared the tab's own Unit 3 unlock gate first.
content_types	Pipe-delimited subset of Keywords / Description / Reading Notes / Shadow Meaning - which content types this challenge draws questions from.
status	awaiting_receiver -> completed.
challenger_score / receiver_score	Integers, nullable. receiver_score stays NULL until they finish playing.
outcome	challenger_win / receiver_win / tie, NULL while pending. A tie is a first-class value here, not inferred from a null winner.
created_at / completed_at	Timestamps. Drive "recently challenged" sort order and history ordering. No expiry logic reads these - an abandoned pending challenge is accepted as-is.

16.2 challenge_questions — the frozen 10-question set

Not a CSV — schema-only, 0 rows, inside zodiac_tarot.db only

Column	Meaning
challenge_id, question_order	Composite primary key. question_order is 1-10, generated once, never regenerated - this table is read back question-by-question, not recomputed.
card_keys	Pipe-delimited; usually one card_key, more for multi-card formats.
format_code	A1 / A2 / A6 / B / C. Symbol formats (A3/A4/A5/A7) are never used here - none of Challenge's four content types map to them.
content_type	Which of the four content types (below) this specific question serves.
difficulty_params	Grid size / scaffold variant / row count, per the difficulty table below. Frozen at generation time.
distractor_set / correct_answer	Frozen at generation time - both players see the identical options.
challenger_answer / challenger_correct	Written as the sender plays.
receiver_answer / receiver_correct	Written as the receiver plays; read back live to drive the running score-comparison.

The four content types and where they come from

Content type	Source column(s)	Formats
Keywords	card_keywords	A1 (keyword-list anchor), A2 (keyword-set candidates), C (keyword rungs)
Description	card_descriptions.description_anonymized / description_condensed	A1 (variant B), A2 (condensed-description anchor), C (anonymized-text rung)
Reading Notes	card_talking_points	A1 (collated points), A2 (talking-points anchor), B (True/False pool), C (reading-notes rung)
Shadow Meaning	card_descriptions.reversed reading notes	A6 only

Format A6 finally gets a home here. Zodiac_Tarot_Curriculum_Design_Spec.pdf explicitly excludes A6 (Shadow Meaning Recognition) from the main Path, since it depends on a card's upright meaning already being taught. Challenge's own Unit 3 unlock gate already guarantees that for every card in its pool, so A6 has no unmet prerequisite here and is used freely - this is not a contradiction with Section 14's curriculum documentation, just a different context with a different guarantee already satisfied.

Difficulty mapping (Section 16's three-tier selection, applied per format)

Format	Easy	Medium	Hard
A1 / A2	Grid of 2, Easy-tier distractors	Grid of 3, Medium-tier	Grid of 4, Hard-tier
A6	Scaffold A/B (upright description or keyword anchor shown)	Scaffold C (single talking point)	Scaffold D (no anchor at all)
B	Easy-tier confusability on the donor card	Medium-tier	Hard-tier
C	2 rows, easiest content-pairing rung	2 rows, hardest rung	3 rows, hardest rung

16.3 challenge_balances — head-to-head record per pair

Not a CSV — schema-only, 0 rows, inside zodiac_tarot.db only

Column	Meaning
user_id_a, user_id_b	The pair. Composite primary key.
wins, losses	Ties don't touch this table at all - per the spec, a tie moves neither player's balance.

Implementation choice, not a design decision: the spec explicitly flags that this table could instead be derived on read from challenges, rather than stored and updated. Built here as a stored table since that's the schema the spec's own data-requirements section lists, but treat it as changeable.

16.4 users.has_unseen_challenge_activity — the tab bar badge

Added as a single boolean column on the existing users table (Section 15.2) rather than a separate notifications table, matching the spec's own "boolean/derived" framing of this as the simplest workable option. Drives the Challenge tab's badge dot.

16.5 Reused content, unchanged card_similarity (distractor confusability per tier), card_keywords / card_descriptions / card_talking_points (the four content types' actual text), and unit_metadata.card_keys_covered (unioned across units 1..N to build the eligible card pool) are all read here exactly as documented elsewhere in this reference - nothing about Challenge modifies the content layer.

17. Rules of Reading

How the guidebook says to use the deck, plus this app's own reversed-card rule. Documentation, not a queryable table.

17.1 Preparing to read

Optional ritual before a first reading: a dedicated surface, a candle, water and sage to purify the hands. Consecrating a new deck once, under a full moon or through incense smoke.

17.2 A Card a Day

Draw one card each morning (or evening, as recap). Look at the imagery first, before reading its meaning - building trust in instinct before reference material.

17.3 The Birth Card and the Card of the Year

- 1 Add every digit of the full birth date (day + month + year) together.
- 2 If the result is greater than 21, add its digits together again.
- 3 Repeat until the result is between 1 and 21.
- 4 Look that number up in Birth Card Lookup (Section 10) for the matching card.

Worked example (28/01/1979): $2+8+1+1+9+7+9 = 37 \rightarrow 3+7 = 10 \rightarrow$ The Magician.

Special-case override: if the reduction lands exactly on 10 or 21, reduce once more anyway ($10 \rightarrow 1+0 \rightarrow 1$ The Magician; $21 \rightarrow 2+1 \rightarrow 3$ The Empress), treating both as "turning-point" cards better passed through than landed on. This is calculation logic, not a row in Birth Card Lookup.

Card of the Year uses the same method on just that year's digits. 2022 example: $2+8+1+2+0+2+2 = 17 \rightarrow$ The Star.

17.4 Meditation on the Elements

Choose an Element, gather every card tied to it, observe recurring feelings and imagery, then sit with one Major Arcana card that embodies it strongly.

17.5 Discovering the Signs

Gather every card tied to one zodiac sign (Aries: The Emperor + Two/Three/Four of Wands) and look for how the sign's character recurs across them.

17.6 The Three Spreads

Single Card (the daily draw, 16.2), plus two formal layouts:

Three-Card Spread:

Pos.	Label	Guiding question
1	The current situation	Where do I find myself in this moment? What is my starting condition?
2	The obstacle	What blocks my energy? What can I work on to free myself?
3	The development	What will my next step be?

Elements Spread:

Pos.	Element	Guiding question
1	Earth	Where can I find nourishment in this situation? What are my starting resources?
2	Air	What ideas might inspire me? How can I communicate better?
3	Fire	What moves me? What is my passion and my creative engine?
4	Water	What are my emotions, and how can I best manage them?
5	Intuition	A message from the cards for the situation being analyzed.

17.7 Reading Reversed Cards: Blocked / Shadow Energy

Authored for this app - not sourced from the guidebook, which has zero reversed material. The rule: a reversed card is the same upright quality, expressed as blocked, delayed, excessive, or turned inward rather than flowing outward. Every reversed_reading_notes entry (Section 8) follows this rule and assumes the reader already knows the upright meaning.

18. How to Access the Database zodiac_tarot.db holds every table above as a real relational SQLite database, plus card/symbol/avatar images embedded as BLOBs. No prior database experience assumed.

18.1 Opening the file

- DB Browser for SQLite (free, graphical) - sqlitebrowser.org, File → Open Database.
- Command line - `sqlite3 zodiac_tarot.db`
- Any programming language - Python's `sqlite3`, Node's `better-sqlite3`, Prisma/SQLAlchemy.

18.2 All tables in the database

Table	Rows	Notes
tarot_cards_base	78	Section 2.
major_arcana_symbols	22	Section 3.
minor_arcana_attributes	56	Section 4.
card_keywords	307	Section 5.
card_talking_points	345	Section 6.
symbol_significance	137	Section 7.
card_descriptions	78	Section 8.
symbol_images	30	Section 9, + icon BLOBs.
birth_card_lookup	21	Section 10.
card_similarity	6,006	Section 11.
teaching_order	78	Section 12.
unit_metadata	10	Section 13.
curriculum_nodes	577	Section 14.
avatar_sources	78	Section 15.1, + image BLOBs.
users	0	Section 15.2 + 16.4. Schema only, populated at runtime.
challenges	0	Section 16.1. Schema only, populated at runtime.
challenge_questions	0	Section 16.2. Schema only, populated at runtime.
challenge_balances	0	Section 16.3. Schema only, populated at runtime.
card_images	78	Not a CSV. Full card artwork embedded as BLOBs.

Every card_key/user_id/etc. foreign key is enforced by the database itself.

18.3 Example queries

Get a card's full record:

SELECT b.card_name, s.symbol, d.description_condensed, d.reversed_reading_notes
FROM tarot_cards_base b
JOIN major_arcana_symbols s ON s.card_key = b.card_key JOIN card_descriptions d ON d.card_key = b.card_key
WHERE b.card_key = 'major_04_emperor';
```

Get a curriculum node's full context:

```
SELECT cn.node_id, cn.card_name, cn.format_code, um.unit_name
FROM curriculum_nodes cn JOIN unit_metadata um ON um.unit_number = cn.unit_number WHERE cn.global_play_order = 1;

18.4 Getting images back out as files

Images are embedded as BLOBs for a complete, portable handoff - a real app should serve them as static files or via a CDN. "Script to extract the images from DB.py" (Python standard library only) pulls all images back out using their original filenames:

python3 "Script to extract the images from DB.py"
```

19. Known gaps, inconsistencies, and judgment calls

Missing keywords in the source guidebook (resolved)

Queen of Cups and Ace of Swords have no guidebook keyword line; King of Cups' were missing from an earlier upload but present in the guidebook. The first two were authored to fill the gap, flagged source = "proposed" in Card Keywords.

Uranus's governed signs conflict in the source text

The guidebook says Uranus governs one sign (Aquarius) in one place, two (plus Capricorn) in another. This document uses Aquarius only.

Minor Arcana glyphs: spot-checked, not exhaustively verified

5 of 56 images were visually inspected directly; the rest filled in from the guidebook's stated list.

Suit icons did not exist originally (resolved)

4 new icons were generated to match the deck's style. The Wands icon (a plain rounded rod) is the weakest visual match - worth a redesign if professional art is commissioned.

Interpreted meaning is deliberately excluded from Tables 2-4

Those tables hold only what's physically visible on a card face, kept independently verifiable against the artwork.

Condensed and anonymized descriptions are hand-rewritten, not algorithmic

Both were rewritten by hand against explicit rules (an 80-word budget; a leak-check against every identity tell) - not generated mechanically. Verbatim original text is preserved alongside both.

Reversed reading notes are authored, not guidebook-sourced

The guidebook contains zero reversed-card material. `reversed_reading_notes` follows one explicit rule (Section 16.7), applied consistently across all 78 cards.

`card_similarity's` score column was renamed after causing real confusion

Originally `difficulty_score` (1=hard, 3=easy - backwards from the name's implication). Renamed to `similarity_score`, with `difficulty_tier` added to spell out Hard/Medium/Easy explicitly.

Teaching order and card similarity are independent inputs

`teaching_order` reflects curriculum design decisions unrelated to `card_similarity's` confusability scoring. The two can legitimately disagree.

unit_metadata and curriculum_nodes pre-existed this database, added here for the first time

Both were created in a separate design thread as CSVs and used directly by two specs (Curriculum Design, Main Path) before ever being added to zodiac_tarot.db. This document is the first time they've been formally documented alongside the rest of the schema.

avatar_sources corrects a wrong assumption in its own source spec

Spec_Meta_Hygiene_Systems.pdf describes generic sequential avatar filenames as a placeholder example. The real, verified assets are card-derived ({card_key}_avatar.png). See Section 15.1.

user_progress is a known, unfilled dependency, now leaned on by three specs

Spec_MainPath.pdf, Spec_Meta_Hygiene_Systems.pdf, and Spec_Challenge_Tab.pdf all assume this table exists and is queryable by unit/node, but none of them designs it. Challenge alone reads it three ways (Section 3's unlock gate, Section 6.2's unit-cap min(), and the friend-eligibility filter). Not created here - see Section 15.3. Whoever eventually specs this table should treat every one of these as a read against it, not a reason to redesign it piecemeal per spec.

Challenge's format A6 usage looks contradictory next to Section 14, but isn't Zodiac_Tarot_Curriculum_Design_Spec.pdf excludes format A6 from the main curriculum entirely. Spec_Challenge_Tab.pdf uses it freely, because Challenge's own Unit 3 gate already guarantees the prerequisite (upright meaning taught) that made A6 unusable on the main Path. Both statements are correct in their own context - flagged here so it doesn't read as a data-model inconsistency.

challenge_balances could be a derived view instead of a stored table

Spec_Challenge_Tab.pdf itself flags this as an open implementation choice, not a locked design decision. Built as a stored table here to match the spec's own data-requirements listing, but win/loss aggregates could equally be computed on read from the challenges table.

The database is a derived artifact and must be manually rebuilt when a CSV changes

This has already caused drift more than once during this project's construction. Treat any CSV edit as incomplete until the database is rebuilt to match.

Broader gamification and real social features remain out of scope

XP and true friend-request/accept flows are explicitly deferred in the Main Path and Meta Systems specs respectively. The Challenge tab is being designed in a separate thread not covered here.

Appendix E: Card Talking Points — full data

Grouped by card.

The Fool [major_00_fool]

- Beginning and ending in one — a fresh cycle starting right after one just closed
- Travels light, takes chances with levity
- On the edge of the precipice, but calm rather than afraid of the void
- Trusts that the path appears once you take the step
- Approaches life with a beginner's mind — curious, unguarded, unjaded
- Nonconformist, revolutionary energy — willing to go against convention
- Says yes to the unknown instead of playing it safe

The Magician [major_01_magician]

- Sees with more than the eyes — perceives both the visible and the invisible
- You already have everything you need; success is about using the resources at hand
- Magic hides in ordinary things — available only to those who know how to look
- Sharp, quick-witted intelligence; can view a situation from multiple angles at once
- A gift for communication — the right words, spoken or written, at the right moment
- Reminds you it's time to act on an idea, not just have it

The High Priestess [major_02_high_priestess]

- Lives on the threshold — between the seen and unseen worlds
- Her power is in receiving and being, not in acting
- Deep listening — she absorbs what others carry and reflects it back transformed
- Trust the vision or feeling that comes without explanation
- A quiet, reflected light rather than a blazing one — like the moon catching the sun's rays
- Offers protection and care from a place of stillness
- Signals it's time to turn inward before doing anything outward

The Empress [major_03_empress]

- Mother Earth energy — fertility, abundance, life growing in every direction
- Something is ready to be born — a child, a project, an idea taking shape
- Creation before form — raw, generative chaos that hasn't settled yet
- Nourish, protect, and grow whatever you're tending
- A reminder to love and care for yourself first
- Pleasure, beauty, and the body are not indulgences — they're part of the message
- Abundance that comes from allowing things to flourish, not forcing them

The Emperor [major_04_emperor]

- Ready to act the instant the moment calls for it — no hesitation
- Sets clear boundaries and claims space without apology
- Gives shape and order to what was still raw potential
- Leadership through decisive, immediate action
- Spring's life force — breaking through and pushing forward
- A spark-first, think-later instinct; leads with action

The Hierophant [major_05_hierophant]

- A bridge between the everyday and the sacred
- When reality feels shaky, lean on faith or tradition to steady it
- The message arrives through a mentor, teacher, or trusted structure
- Spiritual truth doesn't have to abandon the pleasures of daily life
- Holding something divine within an ordinary, grounded life

The Lovers [major_06_lovers]

- A real choice stands in front of you — has every angle actually been weighed?

- Two paths, both valid — the challenge is choosing, not lacking options
- Choosing with the heart, not just the head
- Holding the masculine and feminine, or two sides of yourself, in balance
- A partnership or union that asks you to listen to more than one voice — body, mind, and spirit

The Chariot [major_07_chariot]

- Determined forward motion — ambition finally in gear
- Pulled by two forces that need aligning, not fighting, to move you forward
- Success comes from uniting intuition with rational drive
- Emotion is the fuel, not the obstacle, for this journey
- A strong start — this is initiating energy, not sustaining energy

Strength [major_08_strength]

- Real strength is gentle — it comes from the heart, not force
- Taming the wilder instincts with calm rather than domination
- Courage means acting honestly, not acting fearlessly
- Generosity and warmth are forms of power too
- Connection and relating to others, not standing above them

The Hermit [major_09_hermit]

- Solitude here is productive, not lonely
- A lantern lighting the path one careful step at a time — no need to see the whole road
- Time to withdraw and look inward before moving again
- Attention to small details reveals the bigger picture
- The search itself — quiet, patient introspection — is the point

The Wheel of Fortune [major_10_wheel_of_fortune]

- What goes up comes around — nothing here is permanent, high or low
- A turning point; you're at a hinge between one cycle ending and another beginning
- Fortune and misfortune are both just transitions to learn from
- Stay balanced at the center, even as things spin around you
- Everything is connected — small choices shape what the wheel brings back

Justice [major_11_justice]

- A mirror moment — an honest, unflinching look at yourself
- Acting because it's simply right, not because a rulebook says so
- Responsibility and fairness, driven by the heart rather than obligation
- Seeking balance, harmony, and beauty in how things are resolved
- Cause and effect are catching up — reap what's been sown

The Hanged Man [major_12_hanged_man]

- Suspended, upside down, but calm — not suffering, just paused
- A new perspective comes from surrendering, not struggling
- Pause and let go instead of forcing the next move
- Meditative stillness that deepens awareness
- Sometimes you sacrifice something now to gain something better later

Death [major_13_death]

- Not an ending — a transformation that clears the way for new life
- What no longer has life in it needs to be released, like dead leaves feeding the roots
- Endings free up room for something essential to grow
- Intense, magnetic, and a little uncomfortable — real change usually is
- Look beneath the surface for what actually needs to go

Temperance [major_14_temperance]

- The journey matters more than the destination right now
- Blending different, even opposing, ingredients into something greater than either alone

- Patience and experience refine raw experience into wisdom
- Moderation — finding the right balance rather than swinging to extremes
- Broadening your view by mixing new experiences in

The Devil [major_15_devil]

- Not purely bad — it's misunderstood more than any other card
- The chains look tight, but they're actually loose enough to remove
- Freedom is a responsibility you already hold, whether you use it or not
- A visceral, primal pull worth acknowledging rather than denying
- Ask what dependency or habit is really keeping you stuck

The Tower [major_16_tower]

- Sudden, unexpected change — the lightning strike moment
- What falls apart was already unstable; the collapse just makes it visible
- The point isn't the falling — it's knowing how to fall
- Resisting the change costs more than flowing with it
- Clears the way for a freer view beyond old, rigid thinking
- Sometimes disruption is the only way to break stagnation

The Star [major_17_star]

- Hope returning after the storm — light visible at the end of the tunnel
- An act of giving that seems small but nourishes something larger
- Renewal comes through shared, communal feeling, not isolation
- Staying open and receptive to life, rather than guarded
- A quietly nonconformist light — hope that doesn't need everyone else's approval

The Moon [major_18_moon]

- What's hidden becomes visible in the dark, if you're willing to look
- Trust intuition and dreams over what's plainly stated
- Facing the shadow side is part of becoming whole
- A cycle is repeating — notice the pattern before it repeats again
- The everyday and the spiritual aren't separate; they're two sides of the same coin

The Sun [major_19_sun]

- Pure, uncomplicated joy — like a child's optimism
- True self-expression; showing your real nature without apology
- Warmth, success, and vitality radiating outward
- Even the Sun can burn — don't let confidence tip into self-centeredness
- Sometimes the wisest move is to step back and simply watch things unfold

Judgment [major_20_judgment]

- A calling being answered — your true vocation coming into focus
- Rebirth requires passing through an ending first
- Letting go of what no longer belongs to you, to make room for healing
- A reckoning — reviewing the past honestly before moving forward
- Your voice, finally ready to be used

The World [major_21_world]

- A full cycle completed — the circle closes
- Achievement and wholeness; everything has come together
- Don't linger too long in the comfort of "done" — a new journey is already calling
- Completion that clears the way for the next beginning
- Closure that comes from cutting away what's no longer needed

Ace of Wands [minor_wands_ace]

- A new, passionate spark — the "yes" moment for a fresh start
- The first step of something bigger, not the whole journey yet

- Protect this early spark; it's easy to let it fizzle out
- Say yes to the adventure calling you
- Raw creative energy, ready to be aimed at something

Two of Wands [minor_wands_02]

- A choice between staying close to home or reaching further out
- Survey the whole situation before committing to a direction
- Restless energy looking for the right target
- Planning the next move, not just acting on impulse

Three of Wands [minor_wands_03]

- The plan is coming into focus — you can finally see where this is going
- Standing at the threshold, glimpsing what's possible if you keep going
- Courage now opens the door to real discovery
- Momentum building after the early uncertainty

Four of Wands [minor_wands_04]

- A moment worth celebrating — plans finally coming into the light
- Stability that comes from opposites meeting in the middle
- A gathering, homecoming, or milestone worth marking
- Warmth and welcome after effort — enjoy this one

Five of Wands [minor_wands_05]

- Friction and competing voices — the conflict itself can spark creativity
- Feeling boxed in creatively? Look inward for the way through
- Tension between standing out and fitting in
- Turn the conflict into fuel rather than letting it stall you

Six of Wands [minor_wands_06]

- A hard-won victory — enjoy it, but don't get too comfortable
- Recognition and success earned fairly, not at anyone else's expense
- Confidence radiating outward after a win
- Good fortune following genuine effort

Seven of Wands [minor_wands_07]

- Holding your ground — this is not the moment to back down
- Standing up for what you believe, even under pressure
- Courage to show your true position, even if it's the unpopular one
- Defending what matters, one stance at a time

Eight of Wands [minor_wands_08]

- A message or answer is finally on its way
- Things that were stuck start moving fast now
- Right place, right time — timing is on your side
- Clear, direct communication cutting through delay

Nine of Wands [minor_wands_09]

- Wounded but not out — resting just long enough to go again
- A pause to regroup before the final push
- Resilience built from what's already been survived
- Finding an unlikely refuge to recover your strength

Ten of Wands [minor_wands_10]

- Carrying more than one person should — time to put some of it down
- Recognizing your limits instead of pushing past all of them
- Delegate; you don't have to do everything yourself
- Success achieved, but at the cost of feeling overloaded

Page of Wands [minor_wands_page]

- Childlike enthusiasm for a brand-new idea
- Curiosity leading the way, fear not invited
- A message or spark of inspiration worth following immediately
- Ready to leap into something unexpected, purely out of excitement

Knight of Wands [minor_wands_knight]

- Acts first, thinks later — impulsive but never boring
- A burst of energy that may burn out fast, so use it while it's hot
- Seeks out risk rather than waiting for it to arrive
- Sudden, unexpected movement or change on the horizon

Queen of Wands [minor_wands_queen]

- Radiant, magnetic confidence — impossible not to notice
- Knows exactly what she wants and isn't shy about pursuing it
- Creative power used openly, not hidden away
- Charisma paired with ambition and follow-through

King of Wands [minor_wands_king]

- Leadership that makes everyone around them feel more capable
- Passionate fire, but grounded and steady rather than reckless
- Charisma used in service of a shared goal, not just personal glory
- A warm, sustaining presence rather than a flash in the pan

Ace of Cups [minor_cups_ace]

- A new emotional beginning — infatuation, wonder, or an open heart
- Feelings need to flow, not be bottled up and left still
- Love and connection arriving in a fresh, uncomplicated way
- The start of something that touches you emotionally

Two of Cups [minor_cups_02]

- A meeting of hearts — mutual attraction and discovery
- Early-stage connection; still getting to know each other
- Applies to more than romance — falling for a project or place counts too
- An emotional exchange that feels reciprocal

Three of Cups [minor_cups_03]

- Celebrating with your people — friendship and shared joy
- Abundance that comes from community, not solitude
- Finding others who instantly speak your language
- A good moment to plan and create together

Four of Cups [minor_cups_04]

- Something new is being offered, but you might be too lost in your head to notice
- Nostalgia or daydreaming pulling focus from the present
- Emotional stagnation — restlessness without action
- Check whether you're dwelling on the past instead of receiving what's here now

Five of Cups [minor_cups_05]

- Grieving what's spilled, while missing what's still standing behind you
- Loss that deserves to be felt, not rushed past
- Not everything is gone — something whole remains if you turn around
- Turning regret into awareness rather than staying stuck in it

Six of Cups [minor_cups_06]

- Sweet nostalgia — childhood, old friends, simpler times
- Something from the past worth bringing back into the present
- Innocence and warmth resurfacing

- Reconnecting with what once made you happy

Seven of Cups [minor_cups_07]

- Tempting options everywhere — but not all of them are what they appear
- Illusion versus reality; look twice before choosing
- Too many desires pulling in different directions at once
- Dream freely, but choose with clear eyes

Eight of Cups [minor_cups_08]

- Walking away from something that looks fine but no longer feels right
- Leaving certainty behind on purpose, even without knowing what's next
- A stagnant chapter that needs closing before a new one opens
- Choosing the unknown over staying stuck

Nine of Cups [minor_cups_09]

- Wishes coming true — contentment and fulfillment
- Something good you've been hoping for is close at hand
- Emotional fullness — a genuinely happy moment
- Savoring anticipation, knowing it's about to pay off

Ten of Cups [minor_cups_10]

- Lasting happiness — the kind that feels settled, not fleeting
- Everything finally in its place, emotionally speaking
- Peace that radiates outward to the people around you
- A happy family or home moment worth simply enjoying

Page of Cups [minor_cups_page]

- Falling in love — with a person, an idea, or a new possibility
- Imagination paired with real feeling, not just fantasy
- An innocent, open-hearted new beginning
- A dreamy message or invitation arriving

Knight of Cups [minor_cups_knight]

- Romantic and artistic — leading with heart and imagination
- Gentle, warm, and genuinely caring, if a little unpredictable
- Pursuing something (or someone) out of love and inspiration
- Passion that can flare bright and fade fast — enjoy it while it lasts

Queen of Cups [minor_cups_queen]

- Unconditional love and deep empathy
- Healing through listening rather than fixing
- Sees past people's surface straight to who they really are
- Unshaken by others' judgment because she trusts her own perception

King of Cups [minor_cups_king]

- Emotional stability — feelings held steady, not suppressed
- Listening that actually heals the other person
- Imagination as strength, as long as it stays grounded
- Calm mastery over emotion, used to support others

Ace of Swords [minor_swords_ace]

- Sudden clarity — the fog lifts and the truth is obvious
- Cutting away the unnecessary to get to what actually matters
- Seeing a situation exactly as it is, without emotional static
- Truth separated cleanly from deception

Two of Swords [minor_swords_02]

- A decision being avoided — the truth is known but not yet faced

- Pausing to find inner balance before choosing
- Blindfolded, but the answer is already inside if you're honest with yourself
- Peace comes first, then the choice becomes clear

Three of Swords [minor_swords_03]

- Heartbreak that's real, but necessary to move through, not around
- Pain acknowledged honestly heals faster than pain denied
- A wound that has to open before it can actually close
- Facing hurt with compassion instead of avoidance

Four of Swords [minor_swords_04]

- Rest is the actual next step, not another push forward
- Healing time after a hard stretch — take it
- Compromise reached after the storm has passed
- Quiet reflection restoring inner balance

Five of Swords [minor_swords_05]

- Winning at a cost that might not be worth it
- Conflict that leaves both sides bruised — worth asking if it was necessary
- Even in defeat, don't lose hope for something better
- Standing apart from convention, even if it invites pushback

Six of Swords [minor_swords_06]

- Moving from troubled waters toward calmer ground
- Trust is what makes the journey possible, not just effort
- Leaving an old way of thinking behind for a new outlook
- Slow, steady transition rather than a sudden leap

Seven of Swords [minor_swords_07]

- Playing it close to the chest — not every card needs to be shown yet
- Clever, resourceful thinking that works quietly rather than loudly
- Timing matters more than speed here; wait for the right moment
- A bit of strategic secrecy, not necessarily deception

Eight of Swords [minor_swords_08]

- Trapped by your own thoughts, not by anything actually outside you
- Overthinking has become the obstacle itself
- The blindfold is self-imposed and can be removed
- Freedom is closer than it feels — the limitation is mostly mental

Nine of Swords [minor_swords_09]

- Anxiety and worst-case thinking, often worse than reality
- A sleepless night's fears rarely survive the morning light
- Mind and heart in conflict, both talking at once
- Time to step back and reassess objectively, without the panic

Ten of Swords [minor_swords_10]

- Rock bottom — but also, unmistakably, the end of the cycle
- Nothing left to lose means nothing left holding you back
- A hard ending clears the way for a genuinely new dawn
- The worst has already happened; what follows is lighter

Page of Swords [minor_swords_page]

- An unexpected message or piece of news is on its way
- Sharp, quick-thinking curiosity — always asking questions
- Passionate about learning, but needs to stay grounded, not just in the head
- Watch for mental overload — even a quick mind needs rest

Knight of Swords [minor_swords_knight]

- Moving fast, driven by both ideas and passion — a combustible combination
- Ask whether this is a clear strategy or just being swept along
- Focused on the goal, but risking tunnel vision on the way there
- Bold, direct action fueled by conviction

Queen of Swords [minor_swords_queen]

- Turns raw emotion into clear, honest thought
- Wisdom earned through hard experience, not theory
- Sees through illusion straight to what's actually true
- Direct and unsentimental, but not unkind
- Knows exactly what to cut away and what to protect

King of Swords [minor_swords_king]

- A clear-headed strategist who sees solutions others miss
- Detachment, not coldness, is what makes the judgment sound
- Rising above the situation for a wider view before deciding
- Worth seeking (or being) the calm, rational voice in the room

Ace of Pentacles [minor_pentacles_ace]

- A tangible new opportunity — work, money, or a solid new start
- Like a seed underground, breaking through takes time and patience
- Self-care and healthy boundaries are part of this new foundation
- The opportunity is offered; seizing it is up to you

Two of Pentacles [minor_pentacles_02]

- Juggling multiple responsibilities without dropping any of them
- Balance between work and play, not sacrificing one for the other
- Flexibility and good timing keep everything moving
- Finding rhythm in the daily back-and-forth

Three of Pentacles [minor_pentacles_03]

- Steady, focused effort turning a plan into something real
- Teamwork — different skills combining toward one result
- Discipline and follow-through, not just inspiration
- Building something meant to last

Four of Pentacles [minor_pentacles_04]

- Holding tight to what you've built — sometimes too tight
- Security and boundaries, but watch for rigidity creeping in
- A solid foundation is worth protecting, but not worth hiding behind forever
- Time to loosen the grip and let a little in

Five of Pentacles [minor_pentacles_05]

- Hard times, but you don't have to face them alone
- Asking for help is the move, not a failure
- Scarcity that feels bigger than it is when faced in isolation
- Unexpected resources often show up once you're honest about the need

Six of Pentacles [minor_pentacles_06]

- Generosity flowing in one direction — check whether it's balanced
- Are you the one giving, or the one who needs to receive right now?
- An exchange of resources, help, or support
- Abundance shared freely, without keeping score

Seven of Pentacles [minor_pentacles_07]

- Patience — the seeds are planted, now it's time to wait
- Reward is coming, but only after the work has had time to mature

- Resisting the urge to rush what needs its own timeline
- Trust the process, even when growth isn't visible yet

Eight of Pentacles [minor_pentacles_08]

- Mastery built through daily practice, one careful repetition at a time
- The apprentice mindset — still learning, fully committed
- Attention to detail without losing sight of the bigger goal
- Skill that comes from showing up consistently, not shortcuts

Nine of Pentacles [minor_pentacles_09]

- Enjoying the fruits of your own labor, independently earned
- A quiet, well-deserved moment of rest and refinement
- Self-sufficiency that feels good, not lonely
- Beauty and abundance built from your own consistent care

Ten of Pentacles [minor_pentacles_10]

- Lasting wealth — the kind built across a family or a lifetime, not overnight
- Gratitude for what's already here, not just what's still wanted
- A sense of belonging and legacy, not just material comfort
- Stability that extends beyond just yourself, to home and family

Page of Pentacles [minor_pentacles_page]

- A student mindset — genuinely curious about something new
- Enjoying the process of learning more than rushing to the result
- Careful, detail-oriented dedication to a new skill
- Patience paired with real intellectual curiosity

Knight of Pentacles [minor_pentacles_knight]

- Slow, steady, and completely dedicated to the task at hand
- Willpower and consistency over flash or speed
- Might be so focused on one thing that everything else falls away
- The tortoise's pace, but the tortoise usually finishes

Queen of Pentacles [minor_pentacles_queen]

- Practical nurturing — care that shows up as real, useful help
- Grounded, sensory presence; fully in her body and the physical world
- Self-care as a form of strength, not indulgence
- Solving problems with what's actually available, right here and now

King of Pentacles [minor_pentacles_king]

- Success that's been earned through real, sustained effort
- Generosity that flows naturally from genuine abundance
- Stability and rootedness at the core of this achievement
- Leadership grounded in having actually done the work

Appendix G: Card Descriptions — full data

Grouped by card: label, condensed upright, reversed/shadow, anonymized, then original.

The Fool [major_00_fool] — URANUS

Upright, condensed (65w): The Fool stands at both the start and end of the journey, chaos becoming the engine of a new cycle. He steps to the edge of a precipice unafraid, trusting a path will appear beneath his feet. Associated with Uranus, tied to mystery and quick, unconventional thinking, his energy resists convention and welcomes the unknown, treating every departure as an invitation rather than a risk.

Reversed / shadow: Recklessness without awareness, or fear so strong the leap never happens.

Anonymized: This character stands at both the start and end of a journey, chaos becoming the engine of a new cycle. They step to the edge of a precipice unafraid, trusting a path will appear beneath their feet. Tied to mystery and quick, unconventional thinking, this energy resists convention and welcomes the unknown, treating every departure as an invitation rather than a risk.

Original: Card number zero is the first card of the Major Arcana, but it is also the last. It marks a starting point and an end point, in which chaos becomes the driving force behind exploration and being open to a new cycle. The Fool represents the ability to take chances with levity, he who departs with a single bag and isn't afraid to delve into the wild and unknown. He is usually depicted on the edge of a precipice, unperturbed by the void; on the contrary, he seems to dance toward it. He knows that if he takes a step, a path will appear under his foot. The Fool is associated with Uranus, which in astrology is tied to everything that is open, a predisposition for exploration and mystery, but also for exploration, intelligence, and technology in terms of quick communication. His energy is nonconformist, new and revolutionary. The signs he governs are Capricorn and Aquarius. His element is Air.

The Magician [major_01_magician] — MERCURY

Upright, condensed (72w): The Magician sees beyond the visible, working with the resources already within reach. He knows magic lives in ordinary things, available only to those who know how to use it. Mercury governs this card, lending sharp wit and the ability to view a situation from several angles at once. His staff recalls the caduceus, a symbol of healing, and the tools laid before him show that everything needed is already at hand.

Reversed / shadow: Talent manipulated for personal gain, or a block that keeps real skill from being used.

Anonymized: This character sees beyond the visible, working with the resources already within reach. They know magic lives in ordinary things, available only to those who know how to use it. A quick, communicative planetary energy lends sharp wit and the ability to view a situation from several angles at once. Their staff recalls a symbol of healing, and the tools laid before them show that everything needed is already at hand.

Original: The Magician knows that you can see with more than just your eyes. He knows the visible and invisible and how to contact both. Card number one is a symbol of innate potential, or rather the personal resources of each of us and our ability to use them to obtain what we need. The Magician works with intelligence, knows that magic resides in daily things, and that it is available only to those who know how to see it. He knows it and knows how to use it. The card is associated with Mercury, an astrological aspect that describes the field of communication and bright, vibrant intelligence. Mercury is reason and irony, gifts of the Magician, who allows us to see a situation from multiple perspectives. He represents intellect, our skills, and is connected to written and spoken words. The magic wand of Mercury is the staff, the winged staff that became a symbol of medicine. He governs the signs of Virgo and Gemini, and his element is Air.

The High Priestess [major_02_high_priestess] — MOON

Upright, condensed (62w): The High Priestess lives on the threshold between worlds, receiving rather than acting. Where the Magician does, she absorbs, holding the stories of others through a quiet, dreamlike gestation. Her light is borrowed, like the moon reflecting the sun, delicate and indirect. She embodies the feminine, gestation, and trust in inner vision, offering protection and care from behind her still, watchful veil.

Reversed / shadow: Intuition ignored or drowned out, or secrets revealed before they're ready to be shared.

Anonymized: This character lives on the threshold between worlds, receiving rather than acting. Where another figure acts, she absorbs, holding the stories of others through a quiet, dreamlike gestation. Her light is borrowed, like reflected light, borrowing its glow from elsewhere, delicate and indirect. She embodies the feminine, gestation, and trust in inner vision, offering protection and care from behind her still, watchful veil.

Original: The High Priestess lives on the threshold. She is a lunar and aquatic creature connected to the world of vision and reception. The Magician acts, but she receives. Her ability to relate to an inner world allows her to listen to the stories of others and transform them during the dream gestation that she completes. Water is her element, mutable and connected to the emotional, just like the moon, which presides over the tides and human emotions, which are enchanted by full moons. The High Priestess expresses her magic in her ability to be, rather than in action. Her ability to receive makes her beam a rare and unique light, like the moon, which receives the rays of the sun and transforms them into rarefied and delicate light. It is the bond of humans with nature, especially with the feminine, the receptive, maternity, and gestation. The moon is intuition and imagination. It trusts its visions. It speaks of protection and care, the same things the High Priestess offers from her threshold. She governs the signs of Cancer and Pisces and is connected to the Water element.

The Empress [major_03_empress] — VENUS

Upright, condensed (67w): Card three follows the private reflection of the Two with creation itself. The Empress is Mother Earth incarnate, giving life to a child, a project, or an idea, and reminding us to nurture ourselves as generously as we nurture others. Venus, her ruling planet, brings pleasure, bodily wellbeing, and the glow that comes from within, echoed in the crown of stars and ripened wheat framing her throne.

Reversed / shadow: Nurturing turned smothering, or self-neglect leaving creative energy blocked instead of flowing.

Anonymized: This character follows a private moment of reflection with creation itself. She is Mother Earth incarnate, giving life to a child, a project, or an idea, and reminding us to nurture ourselves as generously as we nurture others. A planet of pleasure and beauty brings bodily wellbeing and the glow that comes from within, echoed in the crown of stars and ripened wheat framing her throne.

Original: The Empress carries the number three of the Major Arcana. Three is creation and follows the intimate reflection of two. The Empress is love, pleasure, body, harmony, and nourishment. The incarnation of Mother Earth, she represents fertility, abundance, life that grows and is developed through all its possibilities. She is the one who gives life, be it a new human or a project, idea, or vision. She is creative chaos, substance before it takes shape, the ability to love, care for, nourish, protect, and grow. The Empress reminds us of the importance of loving ourselves, and she is deeply connected to the feminine. Venus, the planet she is tied to, is an expression of beauty, the joy of pleasure, well-being expressed through a relationship; it is our body and health. It is also the star of the night, the one that shines first, thanks to its inner light. The corresponding signs are Libra and Taurus, and she belongs to the Earth element.

The Emperor [major_04_emperor] — ARIES

Upright, condensed (66w): The Emperor sits ready to act, giving shape to the creative chaos that came before him. He sets clear boundaries and claims his own space without hesitation. Paired with Aries, he shares its springtime urgency, the instinct to sprout and push forward before overthinking. Ruled by Mars's spark, both are combative, reactive, and quick to abandon what no longer excites them, in pursuit of pure momentum.

Reversed / shadow: Authority curdled into rigidity and control, or an inability to set any boundaries at all.

Anonymized: This character sits ready to act, giving shape to the creative chaos that came before. He sets clear boundaries and claims his own space without hesitation. He shares a springtime urgency, the instinct to sprout and push forward before overthinking, ruled by a spark of drive that is combative, reactive, and quick to abandon what no longer excites, in pursuit of pure momentum.

Original: The Emperor, card number four, sits on his throne but is ready to spring into action. This figure speaks of the energy of those who can act at the right moment without losing themselves in hesitation. In addition, the Emperor is able to set clear boundaries and take space for himself. Here, the creative chaos of the previous card takes shape. He rules over life-giving order, the real manifestation of what we have imagined. The Emperor is associated with the sign Aries. Both react to the life force of spring, which allows a blade of grass to break through the earth and sprout. Both are action, immediate reaction, and pure life. Aries loves new things, which it abandons as soon as something new arrives. It is the spark of Mars, the ability to act before thinking, instinct. Aries and the Emperor are combative, energetic, reactive, and they manifest a great capacity for leadership.

The Hierophant [major_05_hierophant] — TAURUS

Upright, condensed (68w): After the stability of Four, the Hierophant introduces the first real crisis, a deeper search for meaning. He bridges the everyday and the sacred, teaching that a spiritual perspective can carry us through hard moments. Pairing him with sensory, present-focused Taurus seems unlikely, until you notice Taurus fully inhabits the here and now. Aries was divine spark; Taurus is the true birth, holding that flame within earthly form.

Reversed / shadow: Rigid dogma, or rejecting all guidance and structure rather than finding a middle path.

Anonymized: After a period of stability, this character introduces the first real crisis, a deeper search for meaning. He bridges the everyday and the sacred, teaching that a spiritual perspective can carry us through hard moments. He's paired with a sensory, present-focused sign that fully inhabits the here and now, holding a flame within earthly form.

Original: Card number five, the Hierophant, is a card in which crisis is experienced for the first time. After the stability of four, five makes our reality waver and places us in a deeper search for meaning in things. The Hierophant, or pontiff, creates a bridge between the sky and the earth, between what is habitual, real, manifest, and what lies high in the skies, the rarefied and mystical. He teaches us that in difficult moments, we must appeal to our more spiritual side. Through this we can overcome those moments. It seems strange to associate Taurus, a sign connected to the pleasures of life, with such a spiritual card, but Taurus knows about ephemeral, and therefore fully lives in the present moment, enjoying and satisfying the senses. Taurus has high values that are manifested in reality. Aries is the divine spark, and Taurus is the true birth, the manifestation of that which is human on Earth, which holds the flame of the divine within.

The Lovers [major_06_lovers] — GEMINI

Upright, condensed (66w): Gemini's communicative, inquisitive mind, ruled by Mercury and tied to Air, sets the tone for the Lovers. The card usually shows two figures beneath a watching angel, forming a triangle of body, mind, and spirit. It centers on a fork in the road: have you weighed every part of the decision? True choice comes from listening to all three voices together, not from the heart alone.

Reversed / shadow: Indecision, or a choice made from fear and pressure rather than the heart.

Anonymized: A communicative, inquisitive mind sets the tone here. The card usually shows two figures beneath a watching angel, forming a triangle of body, mind, and spirit. It centers on a fork in the road: have you weighed every part of the decision? True choice comes from listening to all three voices together, not from the heart alone.

Original: The sign Gemini is characterized by a communicative ability, by the need to investigate and know. Mutable and free, it is tied to the Air element and governed by the planet Mercury, a symbol of communication and mobility. When we speak of Gemini, we are in the realm of mind and intellectual reasoning. Likewise, the Lovers card portrays two people, two complementary elements, often a man and a woman positioned in the form of a triangle with an angel that watches over from above. This card is tied to the possibilities of choice: What path will you take? Have you assessed all aspects of the matter? It represents the multiple parts of us, masculine and feminine, and their nuances. Together, the two figures and the angel can share something about the body, mind, and spirit. Our ability to choose increases and is aware when we listen carefully to these three voices.

The Chariot [major_07_chariot] — CANCER

Upright, condensed (65w): Cancer is a cardinal sign, an initiator especially in matters of intuition, relationships, and feeling. That same initiating drive appears in the Chariot, a card of momentum and ambition. Two horses pull it in different directions, symbols of the forces moving us, and only by aligning intuition with reason can we actually reach the goal. Cancer's emotional current becomes the fuel for the whole journey.

Reversed / shadow: Momentum stalled, or forcing forward motion without the emotional alignment to sustain it.

Anonymized: A cardinal sign is an initiator especially in matters of intuition, relationships, and feeling, and that same initiating drive appears in this card of momentum and ambition. Two horses pull it in different directions, symbols of the forces moving us, and only by aligning intuition with reason can we actually reach the goal. An emotional current becomes the fuel for the whole journey.

Original: To better understand the relationship between the sign Cancer and card number seven, the Chariot, we must start from the fact that Cancer is a cardinal sign, and therefore it holds the power to start something. More specifically, Cancer is an initiator for anything that relates to the world of intuition, relationships and emotions. Those who belong to the sign are generally sensitive and emotional. The Chariot card, likewise, is a card of beginnings and great movement connected to determination and ambition. The Chariot is pulled by two horses, which can be a symbol of the forces that move us. Only by aligning our intuition with rationality can we reach our goal. The driving force of Cancer, its emotional water, will fertilize and feed the journey we must complete.

Strength [major_08_strength] — LEO Upright, condensed (62w): Strength depicts a lion, Leo's clear signature: courage, personal power, and a sense of belonging rather than dominance. This isn't physical force, it's a gentler energy that comes from within and radiates outward. Like Leo, it means following your heart honestly, acting with generosity, and letting creativity flow in harmony with others, letting that softness guide and calm our more aggressive instincts.

Reversed / shadow: Self-doubt overpowering courage, or force and control replacing gentle, heart-led strength.

Anonymized: This card depicts a lion: courage, personal power, and a sense of belonging rather than dominance. This isn't physical force, it's a gentler energy that comes from within and radiates outward. It means following your heart honestly, acting with generosity, and letting creativity flow in harmony with others, letting that softness guide and calm our more aggressive instincts.

Original: In card number eight, Strength, a lion is depicted, an obvious reference to the zodiac sign. The characteristics of the sign Leo are courage, personal power, regality, and the connection with everything, which makes Leo feel fully centered. The strength of Leo, therefore, is not its supremacy over other creatures, but rather a sense of community and contact, the ability to relate. The Strength card is not about aggressive strength or physical prowess. Here, it refers to a gentler energy that comes from within and radiates outward. Strength, like Leo, starts with the heart. It is courage, the ability to follow the heart and act honestly. It is the act of being generous, having the determination to bring out creativity in harmony with everything else. In this card, our gentle side can control the more aggressive instincts and change our actions in the world to bring harmony.

The Hermit [major_09_hermit] — VIRGO

Upright, condensed (65w): Virgo is ruled by Mercury in its most grounded form, detail-oriented and quietly organized. The Hermit masters Virgo's gift for solitude, treating being alone as generative rather than lonely. His lantern lights the path one careful step at a time, mirroring Virgo's patient attention to detail. As the first card in the deck to carry light, the Hermit's path leads inward, toward a spiritual center.

Reversed / shadow: Solitude tipping into isolation, or avoiding the reflection this card usually invites.

Anonymized: A grounded, detail-oriented planetary energy quietly organizes here. This character masters a gift for solitude, treating being alone as generative rather than lonely. Their lantern lights the path one careful step at a time, mirroring a patient attention to detail. As the first card in the deck to carry light, this path leads inward, toward a spiritual center.

Original: The planet that governs the sign of Virgo is Mercury, here in its earthly appearance. The planet of communication and speed becomes detail-oriented, able to organize resources and be forward-thinking. Virgo carries its light in the real, material world, that of daily life. Being the sign Virgo also means knowing how to be independent, seeing solitude as productive and strength-generating. The Hermit is a master of this art. The solitude of the Hermit is always a state of calm, searching and introspection. The lantern he carries illuminates the path, step by step, focusing on the details typical of Virgo and its persistence. The path of the Hermit, the first card that carries light in the Major Arcana, is the path that leads to our spiritual center.

The Wheel of Fortune [major_10_wheel_of_fortune] — JUPITER

Upright, condensed (68w): The Wheel marks a turning point in the journey, the moment personal choice starts shaping destiny. Fortune and misfortune are simply transitions, each one closing a cycle and opening another. From here, the Major Arcana takes on a more spiritual tone. Jupiter, its ruling planet, brings expansion, generosity, and guidance, its very name meaning 'guru' in Hindi. Even abundance needs balance, like standing steady atop a turning wheel.

Reversed / shadow: Resisting the natural turn of events, or feeling stuck in a cycle that won't shift.

Anonymized: This card marks a turning point in the journey, the moment personal choice starts shaping destiny. Fortune and misfortune are simply transitions, each one closing a cycle and opening another. A planet of expansion, generosity, and guidance brings its energy here, its very name meaning 'guru' in Hindi. Even abundance needs balance, like standing steady atop a turning wheel.

Original: Card number ten marks a turning point in the journey from the Fool to the World. The Wheel of Fortune is the card of destiny, or the personal choices that help form it. The Wheel of Fortune marks the alternating phases of life. Fortune and misfortune are just transitions, moments to overcome and to learn something from. It is the card of change, highlighting the highs and lows of life, the end of one cycle and the start of another, something that switches, just like the Major Arcana, which from this point on assumes more spiritual meanings. Jupiter is the planet of expansion and success. It is generous and abundant, and it brings prosperity. Jupiter is the guide that leads us through life. In Hindi, the word for Jupiter means guru, or guide. Like in everything, the abundance of Jupiter can also be too much. It is important to remain balanced, as if we were standing atop the Wheel of Fortune.

Justice [major_11_justice] — LIBRA

Upright, condensed (62w): After the Wheel's turning point comes real responsibility. Justice holds up a mirror, an honest, unflinching reflection of what's true. Its rules aren't written in books, they come from an inner sense of care toward the world. Libra, ruled by Venus just like the Empress, brings its aesthetic, harmony-seeking gaze to this card, so beauty and equanimity become inseparable from what's fair.

Reversed / shadow: Avoiding responsibility, dishonesty with yourself, or an imbalance left unaddressed.

Anonymized: After a prior turning point comes real responsibility. This card holds up a mirror, an honest, unflinching reflection of what's true. Its rules aren't written in books, they come from an inner sense of care toward the world. A sign ruled by a planet of beauty and harmony brings its aesthetic, harmony-seeking gaze here, so equanimity becomes inseparable from what's fair.

Original: When we encounter the card of Justice, just after the turning point of the Wheel of Fortune, we encounter our true responsibility. Justice looks us straight in the eyes. It is a mirror, reflecting a real and honest vision. It is our sense of justice that moves us and moves the actions that come from the heart: that which we do because we can't do otherwise, because we feel that's how it must be. The rules that govern how Justice acts in the world are not listed in books. They are rules dictated by our nature, our sense of care and responsibility toward the world around us. Here, Libra, who is governed by Venus as the Empress, shows the power of the planet in the aesthetic and harmonious gaze it searches for in the world. Beauty, harmony, and equanimity are characteristics of Libra that fully echo in the card of Justice.

The Hanged Man [major_12_hanged_man] — NEPTUNE

Upright, condensed (63w): Before Neptune's discovery, this card belonged simply to Water: flowing, hanging, embracing, just like the Hanged Man himself. Suspended upside down, his calm expression gives away the truth, he isn't suffering, he's meditating, gaining a new perspective through stillness. Crossed legs echo a yoga pose. Neptune, planet of dreams, depth, and sacrifice, and Water's unstoppable flow, capture the soul of this quiet surrender.

Reversed / shadow: Resisting a needed pause, or stalling without the surrender that makes it meaningful.

Anonymized: Before a certain outer planet's discovery, this card belonged simply to Water: flowing, hanging, embracing. Suspended upside down, this character's calm expression gives away the truth: they aren't suffering, they're meditating, gaining a new perspective through stillness. Crossed legs echo a yoga pose. A planet of dreams, depth, and sacrifice, and Water's unstoppable flow, capture the soul of this quiet surrender.

Original: When the Golden Dawn assigned the Major Arcana zodiac signs, the planet Neptune had not yet been discovered. Card number twelve, the Hanged Man, corresponded to the Water element. Water is flowing, hanging, embracing, all which the Hanged Man does, upside down, as he waits and experiences a new perspective. The key to reading the Hanged Man card lies in his expression. It's true, he hangs upside down from a tree branch; but his expression is calm and serene. He is not suffering. He is experiencing a moment of pause and abandon that leads him to greater awareness. It's as if he is meditating. He is often depicted with one leg crossed over the other, like a yoga position. Neptune, the planet of dreams, depth, sacrifice, and its fluid and unstoppable element of Water, best represents the soul of this card.

Death [major_13_death] — SCORPIO

Upright, condensed (65w): Scorpio belongs to November, when decay feeds new growth just as falling leaves fertilize the roots beneath them. Sitting between life and death, Scorpio is magnetic and intense, aware that reaching what's essential means releasing what no longer has life in it. Death carries the same message: not an ending sealed shut, but an organic process that clears space for fresh blood and new beginnings.

Reversed / shadow: Clinging to what's already over, or fear blocking a transformation that needs to happen.

Anonymized: A fixed water sign belongs to a month when decay feeds new growth, just as falling leaves fertilize the roots beneath them. Sitting between life and death, this energy is magnetic and intense, aware that reaching what's essential means releasing what no longer has life in it. This card carries that same message: not an ending sealed shut, but an organic process that clears space for fresh blood and new beginnings.

Original: Scorpio is the sign of November, the month in which transformation and decay bring new life, like the leaves that fall from the trees and become fertilizer for roots. Scorpio is a sign that lies between life and death, of the underground world and the sensuality that leads to life. Scorpio is magnetic, magical, intense, and profound. It knows what lies under the surface and that, to achieve the essential, we must abandon everything that is superfluous, that has no more lifeblood. Death, card number thirteen, has a similar message: it does not seal shut the end of something, but rather is an organic and vital process through which we abandon all that is not viable to make room for new blood, new life.

Temperance [major_14_temperance] — SAGITTARIUS

Upright, condensed (64w): Sagittarius lives by the idea that the journey matters more than the destination, curious and mutable like its element, Fire, torn between instinct and a wish to belong. Temperance embodies alchemy itself, blending different ingredients into something greater than their sum. Through experience and study, both Sagittarius and Temperance temper diverse experiences into deeper understanding, broadening their view of the world along the way.

Reversed / shadow: Impatience with the process, or an imbalance where opposites clash instead of blend.

Anonymized: A mutable fire sign lives by the idea that the journey matters more than the destination, curious and torn between instinct and a wish to belong. This card embodies alchemy itself, blending different ingredients into something greater than their sum. Through experience and study, both energies described here temper diverse experiences into deeper understanding, broadening their view of the world along the way.

Original: The motto of Sagittarius could be that it's not the destination that matters, but the journey. The sign of Sagittarius and its energy are characterized by the need to know and explore. It is a curious and mutable sign like its element, Fire, often divided into instinct and the desire to conform to a common feeling. In the card of Temperance, we find the principle of alchemy: mixing different ingredients to obtain something more than the simple sum of its parts. Through experience and study, it is possible to reach a new level of depth and understanding. Sagittarius, like Temperance, "tempers" its experiences, which can be very diverse, in order to discover and know, to broaden its world and vision.

The Devil [major_15_devil] — CAPRICORN

Upright, condensed (69w): Neither wholly good nor evil, the Devil recalls Pan, half-goat like Capricorn, embodying earthy, instinctual force. Capricorn, a cardinal Earth sign, is practical and control-oriented, especially about material life. Ruled by Saturn, it understands limits and the hard work required to reach a goal. The Devil speaks to that same responsibility: the chains shown are loose, not locked, since our freedom is always a choice we're free to make.

Reversed / shadow: Either waking up to a chain you hadn't noticed, or sinking deeper into it.

Anonymized: Neither wholly good nor evil, this card recalls a mythic half-goat figure, embodying earthy, instinctual force. A cardinal Earth sign is practical and control-oriented, especially about material life. Ruled by a planet of limits, it understands the hard work required to reach a goal. This card speaks to that same responsibility: the chains shown are loose, not locked, since our freedom is always a choice we're free to make.

Original: The card of the Devil is perhaps the most misunderstood card in the deck. And yet, like all the other cards, it's not completely negative or positive. The Devil depicted in the deck recalls Pan, the god of the woods, forests and wild spirits. In his goat form, like Capricorn—half goat, half fish—he represents the earthly, chthonic, and visceral world that moves our primordial instinct. The sign Capricorn is a cardinal sign of Earth. This means that it is a practical sign oriented to organization and control, specifically in the material aspect of life. Governed by Saturn, Capricorn knows limits and responsibility, the hard work it takes to reach your objectives. The Devil also speaks of responsibility. In fact, the chains around the neck of the people next to him are loose, not tight, and can easily be removed. The responsibility of our freedom, our free choices, is in our hands.

The Tower [major_16_tower] — MARS

Upright, condensed (67w): Mars is raw energy, the god of war, tied to Fire and unafraid to stir what's grown stagnant. It speaks up against injustice rather than staying silent. That same activist spirit strikes the Tower: lightning shatters it, but what matters is how it falls. Rather than resisting the change, it rides the wave, using Mars's fire to survive and see beyond the old, outgrown way of thinking.

Reversed / shadow: A collapse delayed rather than faced, or clinging to structures already crumbling.

Anonymized: A planet of raw energy, a mythic figure of war, is unafraid to stir what's grown stagnant. It speaks up against injustice rather than staying silent. That same activist spirit strikes here: lightning shatters the structure, but what matters is how it falls. Rather than resisting the change, it rides the wave, using that fire to survive and see beyond the old, outgrown way of thinking.

Original: Mars is pure energy; known as the god of war, it is a symbol of movement, destruction, and transformation. Mars initiates, pushes and motivates. It knows where to direct vital energy, even if it will create significant changes. It has direct energy that rouses things that have been stagnant. It's no coincidence that the planet is connected to the Fire element. Mars is the one that speaks, does not remain silent before injustice, stands up and defends. It has the spirit of an activist. We find this quality also in the Tower, in which a strike of lightning creates a change. The tower crumbles, but the important thing is that it knows how to fall. It rides the wave of transformation and does not resist change. It flows. It is the moment to be a warrior, to wear armor, to protect oneself, to use the fire of Mars to survive and acquire a new and freer vision beyond old ways of thinking.

The Star [major_17_star] — AQUARIUS

Upright, condensed (74w): A woman pours water onto both earth and river, an act that feeds the ground while also serving something purely ideal, hope, and shared intention. Aquarius carries a double nature: airy and lucid, yet emotionally tied to Water. Ruled by Uranus, the only planet spinning on its side, Aquarius marches to its own rhythm, valuing collective good over individual will. In the Star, that uniqueness becomes hope itself, an openness to life and nature.

Reversed / shadow: Hope dimmed, disconnection from community, or faith in the future running dry.

Anonymized: A figure pours water onto both earth and river, an act that feeds the ground while also serving something purely ideal, hope, and shared intention. A fixed air sign carries a double nature: airy and lucid, yet emotionally tied to Water. Ruled by an outer planet that spins on its side, this energy marches to its own rhythm, valuing collective good over individual will. Here, that uniqueness becomes hope itself, an openness to life and nature.

Original: A woman pours water on the earth and into a river. On one side, her action feeds the earth; on the other, she pours water into water in an apparently useless gesture that is however connected to the ideal, hope and the union of intentions. Aquarius also has a double meaning. It is tied to Air, being a sign of the element and therefore mental, lucid, full of innovative solutions. And it is tied to Water through the emotional and spiritual world. Aquarius is "the one who brings water." It reinvigorates the world through emotions that are not individual but rather shared, with an eye to universal love, the importance of ideals, and community. Governed by Uranus, the only planet in the solar system that spins on an axis of 98 degrees (basically, the movement of Uranus is unique, unlike any other planet), it is a nonconformist sign that moves to its own beat, distancing itself from the majority. In the Star card, the uniqueness of Aquarius becomes hope, the light that can be seen at the end of the tunnel, fortune, and being open and receptive to life and nature.

The Moon [major_18_moon] — PISCES

Upright, condensed (71w): The Moon asks us to look closely at our hidden, intimate side, where the senses sharpen and everything takes on a deeper, more magical dimension. It resonates with Pisces, the zodiac's final and most inwardly guided sign, where daily life and spirit meet, echoed in the two fish swimming in opposite directions. Ruled by Neptune, planet of mystery, this card invites us into the unknown to face repeating patterns and grow.

Reversed / shadow: Confusion or self-deception overtaking intuition, fear clouding what needs to be seen clearly.

Anonymized: This card asks us to look closely at our hidden, intimate side, where the senses sharpen and everything takes on a deeper, more magical dimension. It resonates with a mutable water sign, the zodiac's final and most inwardly guided sign, where daily life and spirit meet, echoed in two fish swimming in opposite directions. Ruled by a planet of mystery, this card invites us into the unknown to face repeating patterns and grow.

Original: The Moon invites us to observe our more hidden and intimate side from up close. In the darkness, under its light, our senses become more receptive and every thing we see acquires a new, deeper and magical dimension. Connected to intuition, profound visions, and to emotion, femininity, dreams, and psychic abilities, the Moon card echoes intensely in Pisces. The Moon asks us to investigate our darker side because only through the integration of every part can we access a more complete and spiritually satisfying life. It also asks us to observe the cycles that are completed in our life, to change them, if necessary, to avoid repeating the same errors. Pisces, the last sign of the zodiac, is a guiding sign, like Aries, the first sign, but Pisces is guided to the inner world, to our depths. At the end of the zodiac, the daily and the spiritual are united and complementary, just like the symbol itself of the sign, which depicts two equal and opposing fish. Governed by Neptune, the planet of things that are hidden and mysterious, it invites us into the unknown, the light of the Moon.

The Sun [major_19_sun] — SUN

Upright, condensed (69w): The Sun and its ruling planet share a name, radiating warmth, life, and true self-expression. Often shown with a child, symbolizing purity, creativity, and optimism, this card brings fortune and success drawn from authentic identity rather than performance. As the pulsing heart of the whole system, the Sun offers vital light, but with a caution: get too close and you can be burned, so avoid centering everything on yourself.

Reversed / shadow: Confidence dimmed, or joy performed rather than genuinely felt.

Anonymized: A card and its ruling planet share a name, radiating warmth, life, and true self-expression. Often shown with a child, symbolizing purity, creativity, and optimism, this card brings fortune and success drawn from authentic identity rather than performance. As the pulsing heart of the whole system, it offers vital light, but with a caution: get too close and you can be burned, so avoid centering everything on yourself.

Original: The Sun, number nineteen, and its planet in this case already correspond in name. In this card, we often find a baby, which symbolizes purity and inner strength, creativity, the optimism with which to approach the world. The Sun shines and brings light: it radiates warmth and life, offering fortune and success. This is the card of true self-expression, of our inner nature. The Sun is the pulsing heart of our system. It emanates light and is a source of life, just like the energy that resides in this card. We must also remember that if you come too close to the Sun, you can get burned. It's important not to fall into egocentrism, as the card suggests; and to not always put yourself at the center of things, but rather to sometimes stand back and watch what happens.

Judgment [major_20_judgment] — PLUTO

Upright, condensed (69w): Pluto, planet of the underworld, governs death, resurrection, and deep transformation, fitting for Judgment, the second-to-last Major Arcana card yet arguably the true conclusion of the Fool's journey. Here we find our real calling and true voice, but only by first passing through endings, rebirths, and transformations that reach into our depths. Pluto's guidance is to release old patterns and anything that no longer belongs, making room for healing.

Reversed / shadow: Avoiding the call to change, or harsh self-judgment blocking real healing.

Anonymized: An outer planet of the underworld governs death, resurrection, and deep transformation, fitting for this card, second-to-last in its sequence yet arguably the true conclusion of a much longer journey. Here we find our real calling and true voice, but only by first passing through endings, rebirths, and transformations that reach into our depths. Its guidance is to release old patterns and anything that no longer belongs, making room for healing.

Original: Pluto is the planet of the Underworld, associated with death, resurrection, and, more specifically, transformation. It is connected to card number twenty, Judgment. Although it is the second-to-last card of the Major Arcana, I believe it represents the conclusion of the journey from the Fool to the World. In the Judgment card, we find our true vocation, our mission in the world, and our voice. In order for this to happen, we must overcome deaths, rebirths, and transformative processes, the same ones that go through the depths. More specifically, here, Pluto suggests we abandon old schemes and all that no longer belongs to us so that we can reach healing and rebirth.

The World [major_21_world] — SATURN

Upright, condensed (66w): The journey that began with the Fool completes here. Saturn, the planet that sets boundaries and cuts away the unnecessary, governs this final card, often shown with a wreath symbolizing wholeness and a closed circle. From the World, all that's left is to begin again, staying open rather than settling into comfort. Saturn closes this cycle cleanly, clearing the way for the next one to start.

Reversed / shadow: A cycle left unfinished, or resistance to closing one chapter before starting the next.

Anonymized: A journey that began much earlier completes here. A planet that sets boundaries and cuts away the unnecessary governs this final card, often shown with a wreath symbolizing wholeness and a closed circle. From here, all that's left is to begin again, staying open rather than settling into comfort. That same planetary energy closes this cycle cleanly, clearing the way for the next one to start.

Original: The journey that started with the Fool ends here. The World, card number twenty-one, is the last in the Major Arcana, and from it a new cycle starts. The World is a card that completes a journey, and Saturn is the planet that severs, sets boundaries, and separates. Around the central figure of the card, we usually find a wreath, something that represents a whole, the closing of a circle, the achievement of a goal. From the World card we can only start again. It's important not to close ourselves off too much, to not stand still in our comfort zone too long, but to be ready to leave our world to explore another one. Saturn concludes this cycle, severs what's unnecessary, and allows us to embark on this new journey.

Ace of Wands [minor_wands_ace] — ARIES · LEO · SAGITTARIUS

Upright, condensed (63w): This Ace is fire in its rawest form, holding the renewing energy shared by its three signs. It marks a passionate new adventure, the moment the world says yes and dares you to act. It's the very first step toward a new idea, fragile like the first spark, needing protection and fuel so it can grow into something lasting rather than fizzling out.

Reversed / shadow: A spark that fizzles before catching, or hesitation instead of a bold yes.

Anonymized: This card is fire in its rawest form, holding the renewing energy shared by its three related signs. It marks a passionate new adventure, the moment the world says yes and dares you to act. It's the very first step toward a new idea, fragile like the first spark, needing protection and fuel so it can grow into something lasting rather than fizzling out.

Original: This Ace is the spark of fire, and it contains the renewing and vital energy of the signs that belong to this element. The Ace of Wands is a new, passionate adventure. When you encounter it, you know that you can dare because the world will say "yes" to you. It also represents the first action that you take with a new idea or project. It is the first step. This energy needs to be protected and channeled and must not dissipate like the first sparks of a fire. They need to be fueled so that the fire may burn.

Two of Wands [minor_wands_02] — MARS IN ARIES, FIRST DECAN

Upright, condensed (60w): Every Two divides energy into dialogue and choice, and here Mars and Aries bring pure, active intensity to that decision. The pull is impulsive and reactive, urging quick movement. This card asks whether your action should serve your own small world or reach toward the wider community. Before acting, it's worth stepping back to take in the whole situation clearly.

Reversed / shadow: Indecision, or fear of the unknown keeping you from committing to a direction.

Anonymized: Every card of this number divides energy into dialogue and choice, and here two forces bring pure, active intensity to that decision. The pull is impulsive and reactive, urging quick movement. This card asks whether your action should serve your own small world or reach toward the wider community. Before acting, it's worth stepping back to take in the whole situation clearly.

Original: In the Two of Wands, like with every other Two, we see a division of energy, a dialogue and a choice. In this case, both Mars and the Aries signs are active, pure energy. They often represent impulsive, vital, and reactive action toward a situation. This card invites you to choose whether your action will be directed toward your small world or toward the external community.

Where will you choose to act? It's time to observe the general situation so you can decide how to act most effectively.

Three of Wands [minor_wands_03] — SUN IN ARIES, SECOND DECAN

Upright, condensed (59w): The Sun sits at home in Aries here, lending courage and willful clarity to this card. After the Ace's spark and the Two's decision, the project finally comes into focus, vision replacing uncertainty. We stand at the threshold of a wider adventure, catching a glimpse of what awaits if we're brave enough to keep moving forward into the unknown.

Reversed / shadow: Vision clouded, or delays stalling progress just as momentum was building.

Anonymized: A warm, confident planetary energy sits comfortably in a bold sign here, lending courage and willful clarity to this card. After an initial spark and a difficult decision, the project finally comes into focus, vision replacing uncertainty. We stand at the threshold of a wider adventure, catching a glimpse of what awaits if we're brave enough to keep moving forward into the unknown.

Original: Here, the Sun is in Aries, a sign that is like its home. The Sun-in-Aries sign is an astrological position where many aspects of this card recall the courageous and very willful nature of Aries. In the Three of Wands, we find vision; the project becomes clear. After the initial energy of the Ace and the choice of Two, we can now embark on the wild and unknown adventure that awaits us out there. We are still on the threshold, in that place that gives us a glimpse of the wonders that await, that we can encounter if we just have the courage to continue.

Four of Wands [minor_wands_04] — VENUS IN ARIES, THIRD DECAN

Upright, condensed (61w): Two figures celebrate in warm, welcoming light, echoing the Empress and Emperor meeting here as Venus and Mars. Venus is in exile in Aries, not entirely at ease with its combative energy, yet that friction produces a stability worth marking. When opposites meet and settle, the result is something to celebrate: gatherings, plans finally taking shape, and shared warmth after effort.

Reversed / shadow: A celebration postponed, or instability where solid ground was expected.

Anonymized: Two figures celebrate in warm, welcoming light, echoing a nurturing and an assertive energy meeting here. One of these energies is somewhat out of its natural element, not entirely at ease with the other's combative nature, yet that friction produces a stability worth marking. When opposites meet and settle, the result is something to celebrate: gatherings, plans finally taking shape, and shared warmth after effort.

Original: We stand before another solar card. Two figures celebrate in a bright, warm, and welcoming space. In the Four of Wands, we find grace and celebration. Here, the Empress and Emperor, Venus and Mars, meet. In fact, in this position, Venus is in exile. She doesn't feel entirely comfortable in the active and warriorlike energy of Mars and the Aries sign. The Four of Wands evokes this balance. When polar opposites meet, they create a stability worth celebrating. The card is related to celebrations, meetings, plans that can see the light.

Five of Wands [minor_wands_05] — SATURN IN LEO, FIRST DECAN

Upright, condensed (60w): As with most Fives, this card brings a conflict to work through. Saturn's limits meet Leo's regal, expressive fire, so self-expression can feel constrained here. Leo's individuality also stands opposite Aquarius's community focus, adding to the tension. Saturn's invitation is to turn inward, rediscovering strength and security in yourself, letting the friction itself become raw material for something newly creative.

Reversed / shadow: Conflict avoided entirely, or tension escalating past the point of being useful.

Anonymized: As with most cards of this number, this card brings a conflict to work through. A structured, limiting energy meets a regal, expressive fire, so self-expression can feel constrained here. This energy's individuality also stands opposite a more community-focused one, adding to the tension. The invitation is to turn inward, rediscovering strength and security in yourself, letting the friction itself become raw material for something newly creative.

Original: As often happens with number Five, here, too, we encounter a challenge and a conflict that must be overcome. Saturn, the master of time, limits, and regulations, meets Leo, a regal, solar, and effusive sign. Therefore, when we find this card, it's possible that we could experience a moment in which our expressive energy is limited. We must look inward and tap into our creative resource to find a new path. Leo expresses individuality in opposition to Aquarius, which is on the other hand, connected to community. Saturn, here, invites us to rediscover security and strength in ourselves by working through the conflict that might become creative action.

Six of Wands [minor_wands_06] — JUPITER IN LEO, SECOND DECAN

Upright, condensed (66w): After the struggle of the Five, this card holds full self-expression: optimism, joy, and expansion, as Jupiter meets Leo's warmth. The battle is won and we're heading home to a personal celebration, earned fairly rather than at anyone else's expense. Still, the card cautions against resting too long on this win. Enjoy it fully, but remember Jupiter's luck is only ever a season, not a guarantee.

Reversed / shadow: Success going unrecognized, or pride curdling into arrogance.

Anonymized: After a prior struggle, this card holds full self-expression: optimism, joy, and expansion, as a generous, lucky energy meets a warm one. The battle is won and we're heading home to a personal celebration, earned fairly rather than at anyone else's expense. Still, the card cautions against resting too long on this win. Enjoy it fully, but remember that luck is only ever a season, not a guarantee.

Original: After the difficulty of card number Five, the Six of Wands holds full self-expression: optimism, joy, and creative expansion are all experiences that Jupiter brings together in the sign of Leo. We have won our battle; we are returning home. In the card we find a personal celebration that carries another piece of advice: be careful not to rest too much on your laurels. This moment should be celebrated and relished fully, with the understanding, however, that it can change. It is a victory won fairly, in full agreement with Leo and not at the expense of others. At the same time, Jupiter brings good luck and certain success.

Seven of Wands [minor_wands_07] — MARS IN LEO, THIRD DECAN

Upright, condensed (65w): Mars's raw drive meets Leo's courage and will, pushing us into action. This card says we're ready to meet whatever comes with valor and readiness, standing firmly behind our own values regardless of the cost. It asks us to show ourselves fully rather than hide, since our example, like Leo's generous regality, can inspire others even in difficulty. This isn't the moment to back down.

Reversed / shadow: Feeling overwhelmed and giving ground, rather than standing firm on what matters.

Anonymized: A driving, assertive energy meets courage and will, pushing us into action. This card says we're ready to meet whatever comes with valor and readiness, standing firmly behind our own values regardless of the cost. It asks us to show ourselves fully rather than hide, since our example, like a generous kind of regality, can inspire others even in difficulty. This isn't the moment to back down.

Original: In the Seven of Wands, we proceed toward action. Here, the life force of Mars meets the will and courage of Leo. This card tells us that we are ready to face everything that will happen with valor, readiness, and energy. It is a card that refers to personal values, that pushes us to follow our nature, whatever it costs. We must figure out what we are made of and not be afraid to show ourselves fully. Our value, however, can be inspiration for others, just like Leo shows off its regality with a generous heart despite difficulties. Let us stand up for our rights, says the Seven of Wands. This is not the time to move back.

Eight of Wands [minor_wands_08] — MERCURY IN SAGITTARIUS, FIRST DECAN

Upright, condensed (64w): Mercury's speed and Sagittarius's directness amplify each other here, the planet of messages paired with the sign that says things plainly and aims straight at its goal. This card signals an important message about to arrive, something long stuck suddenly freeing itself, a solution appearing right on time. It's a reminder that you're exactly where you need to be, at exactly the right moment.

Reversed / shadow: Delays and miscommunication, or frustration as things move slower than expected.

Anonymized: A quick, communicative energy and a direct, straight-talking sign amplify each other here. This card signals an important message about to arrive, something long stuck suddenly freeing itself, a solution appearing right on time. It's a reminder that you're exactly where you need to be, at exactly the right moment.

Original: Mercury alongside Sagittarius amplifies its communicative power. In this card, the planet of speed and the communication of information matches the zodiac sign that can focus on a goal and reach it by clearly expressing its intentions better than any other sign. Mercury is the messenger; Sagittarius says things as they are. When we encounter this card, we must wait for the arrival of an important message, something stuck that finally frees itself, the arrival of a solution. We are in the right place at the right time!

Nine of Wands [minor_wands_09] — MOON IN SAGITTARIUS, SECOND DECAN

Upright, condensed (65w): The Moon's intuitive, reflective pull takes on Sagittarius's restless energy here, giving dreams a dynamic edge. This card marks a pause for regrouping before the next move toward a goal, intuition sharpened into precision, like an arrow aimed carefully. There's resilience here too, the strength to return to the fight even while wounded. Under the Moon, home might be somewhere unconventional, wherever lets you recover.

Reversed / shadow: Exhaustion from refusing to rest, or defensiveness held long after the threat has passed.

Anonymized: An intuitive, reflective energy takes on a restless one here, giving dreams a dynamic edge. This card marks a pause for regrouping before the next move toward a goal, intuition sharpened into precision, like an arrow aimed carefully. There's resilience here too, the strength to return to the fight even while wounded. Home, in this case, might be somewhere unconventional, wherever lets you recover.

Original: The Moon reflects our intuitive and intimate side. When it encounters Sagittarius, like in the Nine of Wands, our dreams are marked with the dynamic energy of the sign. The Nine of Wands represents a break, during which we can focus on the next move that will lead us to achieve our goal. Here, intuition is connected to planning and precision, like an arrow shot from a bow. In the card, there is also a great force, which allows us to firmly go back on the attack even if we are injured. In addition, the Moon often refers to home. In Sagittarius, our home can be in unusual places, like on the seaside, in the trunk of a tree, or in an abandoned hut so that you can regain your strength for a new adventure.

Ten of Wands [minor_wands_10] — SATURN IN SAGITTARIUS, THIRD DECAN

Upright, condensed (61w): Saturn's limits meet Sagittarius's love of expansion, an unlikely pairing that can actually teach real efficiency, if Sagittarius is willing to listen. This card warns against overextending: measure your effort, respect your resources, and don't try to carry everything at once. It's also a reminder about delegating, since recognizing and accepting our limits is what actually lets a plan reach completion.

Reversed / shadow: Burnout from refusing to delegate, carrying far more than is sustainable.

Anonymized: A limiting energy meets a love of expansion, an unlikely pairing that can actually teach real efficiency, if that expansive side is willing to listen. This card warns against overextending: measure your effort, respect your resources, and don't try to carry everything at once. It's also a reminder about delegating, since recognizing and accepting our limits is what actually lets a plan reach completion.

Original: In this card, Saturn, master of boundaries and limits, encounters Sagittarius, an expert of expansion and adventure. At first glance, it might seem like Saturn in this position would be a killjoy; but if Sagittarius cooperates with Saturn's message, it might learn a lot and be truly efficient. The card itself says so: in the Ten of Wands, we must pay attention and not exaggerate. Measuring our effort, being aware of our resources, and rationing our energy are necessary if we want to fully reach our objective and fulfill our plans. The card reminds us also of the importance of delegating. We cannot do everything; we need to recognize, accept, and respect our limits.

Upright, condensed (68w): Fresh, curious, and unafraid, the Page of Wands blends Air's inspiration with Fire's energy, holding the Ace of Wands as if daring the unknown with a child's open heart. He turns fear into vitality and creative drive, embodying a new project, journey, or surprise worth embracing rather than avoiding. His spirit trusts the exploratory, lively nature of the whole Wand suit. It's time to follow what excites you.

Reversed / shadow: Ideas scattered and never acted on, or hesitation where curiosity should lead.

Anonymized: Fresh, curious, and unafraid, this character blends airy inspiration with fiery energy, holding onto an early spark as if daring the unknown with a child's open heart. They turn fear into vitality and creative drive, embodying a new project, journey, or surprise worth embracing rather than avoiding. Their spirit trusts the exploratory, lively nature of this whole suit. It's time to follow what excites you.

Original: The Page of Wands embodies the spirit of Air and energy of Fire. He is fresh and new, like inspiration and curiosity. He is ready to embark on a new adventure. He holds a wand that is the Ace of Wands. He can dare, say yes to the unknown, stand before life as a child would, with enthusiasm and purity of heart. The Page of Wands has no fear. He transforms it into vitality and creative ability. He represents a new project, a journey, something unexpected to be embraced without fear, trusting the exploratory and lively spirit that characterizes the Wand suit. It's time to follow what inspires us.

Knight of Wands [minor_wands_knight] — FIRE OF FIRE

Upright, condensed (71w): Where the Page merely imagines, the Knight of Wands can't wait to chase the idea down. Pure Fire, he takes risks eagerly, acting first and thinking later, without the King's steadier awareness. His enthusiasm can burn out quickly after a strong start, since pacing isn't his strength. He may signal sudden change or the need to move fast without overthinking; consequences can be sorted out afterward. Nothing about him is boring.

Reversed / shadow: Recklessness without direction, or enthusiasm burning out before anything is finished.

Anonymized: Where a younger figure merely imagines, this character can't wait to chase the idea down. Pure fire, they take risks eagerly, acting first and thinking later, without a steadier figure's awareness. Their enthusiasm can burn out quickly after a strong start, since pacing isn't their strength. They may signal sudden change or the need to move fast without overthinking; consequences can be sorted out afterward. Nothing about them is boring.

Original: Where the Page of Wands visualizes a new idea, the Knight of Wands can't wait to go after it! Governed by the Fire element, this knight is ready to embark on an adventure. He knows how to take risks; in fact, he often goes in search of them. First he acts, then he thinks. He doesn't have the awareness of the King of Wands but possesses courage and initiative. Often, he does not know how to save energy, and it's possible that after an enthusiastic start, his energy quickly dims. He can represent unexpected change or the need to act quickly without thinking too much. The consequences of our actions can be assessed at a later time. One thing is certain: with the Knight of Wands, nothing is ever boring!

Queen of Wands [minor_wands_queen] — WATER OF FIRE

Upright, condensed (71w): Radiant and fully herself, the Queen of Wands knows her own power and isn't shy about using it. Unlike the Queen of Cups's healing energy, hers is creative and magnetic, driven and ambitious toward success. Charismatic enough to be noticed the moment she enters a room, she's often shown with a black cat, hinting at intuitive, even witchy abilities she openly embraces rather than hides. She knows exactly what she wants.

Reversed / shadow: Confidence curdling into control, or radiance dimmed by self-doubt.

Anonymized: Radiant and fully herself, this character knows her own power and isn't shy about using it. Unlike another figure's healing energy, hers is creative and magnetic, driven and ambitious toward success. Charismatic enough to be noticed the moment she enters a room, she's often shown with a black cat, hinting at intuitive, even witchy abilities she openly embraces rather than hides. She knows exactly what she wants.

Original: The Queen of Wands is completely herself. Just like the sunflowers that open up on her card, this queen is radiant, confident and vibrant. She knows she has power and how to use it. Her energy is not that of a healer and listener like the Queen of Cups, but is creative and magical. Her actions are motivated, ambitious, and focused on success. She is joyous and charismatic, a person you notice when she enters a room. She is often accompanied by a black cat, which represents her intuitive abilities, the fact that she is a witch. She does not hide this inclination of hers, but rather shows it off. She knows what she wants and how to obtain it.

King of Wands [minor_wands_king] — EARTH OF FIRE

Upright, condensed (69w): The true leader of the Wand suit, this King roots Fire's creative, transformative energy in steady Earth. Honest and capable, he leads others toward shared goals with real charisma, acting more cautiously than the impulsive Knight but sharing the Queen's gift for putting personal power at the community's service. Near him, people feel stronger and more capable, warmed by an energy as steady and intense as a well-tended fire.

Reversed / shadow: Leadership turned overbearing, or reluctance to step into the role at all.

Anonymized: The true leader of this suit, this character roots a creative, transformative fire energy in steady earth. Honest and capable, he leads others toward shared goals with real charisma, acting more cautiously than a more impulsive figure but sharing another figure's gift for putting personal power at the community's service. Near him, people feel stronger and more capable, warmed by an energy as steady and intense as a well-tended fire.

Original: Here, we find the true leader of the Wand suit: the King. His Fire energy, that of creation and transformation, is rooted in the Earth element. He is honest, capable of leading others and reaching common goals, and possesses great charisma. His courage and actions are more cautious than those of the Knight of Wands. He is more similar to the Queen, since the King also perfectly manages his great personal power and makes it available to the community, thanks to his inclination for leadership. When we find ourselves next to a person like this, we feel stronger and more capable. His energy is radiant, intense, like a constantly stoked fire that warms the long winter nights.

Ace of Cups [minor_cups_ace] — CANCER · SCORPIO · PISCES

Upright, condensed (61w): Cups belong to Water and emotion, tied to universal love, relationship, and spirituality; like water left still, feelings need to keep flowing rather than stagnate. This card blends Cancer's pure, domestic stream, Scorpio's mysterious depths of death and rebirth, and Pisces's boundless, healing sea. As an Ace, it marks a true beginning: infatuation, wonder, and new emotion arriving all at once.

Reversed / shadow: Emotion suppressed or blocked, rather than flowing freely into something new.

Anonymized: This suit belongs to Water and emotion, tied to universal love, relationship, and spirituality; like water left still, feelings need to keep flowing rather than stagnate. This card blends a pure, domestic stream, a mysterious depth of death and rebirth, and a boundless, healing sea, drawn from its three related signs. As a first card of its kind, it marks a true beginning: infatuation, wonder, and new emotion arriving all at once.

Original: The world of Cups is that of the Water element and emotions. This suit is connected to universal love, relationships, and spirituality. The cup contains things and lets them flow, just like water, which, if left alone, becomes stagnant. In this card we find the water of the stream, that of Cancer, which is pure, crystalline, and domestic; the water of the swamp, that of Scorpio, which holds the mystery of death and rebirth, dark and magical depths; and, lastly, the water of Pisces, that of the infinite sea, boundless, deep and healing. Due to the nature of being an Ace, that of an initiator, the card represents a new beginning, an infatuation, the discovery of wonder, new emotions that arise.

Two of Cups [minor_cups_02] — VENUS IN CANCER, FIRST DECAN

Upright, condensed (64w): Venus entering Cancer expands our emotional life, especially around love and connection, exactly what this card shows: two figures crossing cups in a gesture of closeness and discovery. It's the early stage of a relationship, drawn to someone or something without yet knowing it deeply. This doesn't have to mean romance specifically; it applies just as well to a new project, place, or experience.

Reversed / shadow: Imbalance or miscommunication where mutual connection should be.

Anonymized: A loving planetary energy entering a nurturing sign expands our emotional life, especially around love and connection, exactly what this card shows: two figures crossing vessels in a gesture of closeness and discovery. It's the early stage of a relationship, drawn to someone or something without yet knowing it deeply. This doesn't have to mean romance specifically; it applies just as well to a new project, place, or experience.

Original: When Venus enters Cancer, we can experience our emotions as an expansion, especially those related to love and relationships, exactly what we find in the Two of Cups. Two figures meet and cross cups, a symbol of emotional closeness and discovery. It's the first phase of a relationship in which we don't yet know the other on a deeper level, but we are attracted and interested. This process does not necessarily refer only to that between two people, but also to a relationship we might have with a project, a place or an experience.

Three of Cups [minor_cups_03] — MERCURY IN CANCER, SECOND DECAN

Upright, condensed (61w): Where Venus discovers emotion in one relationship, Mercury here communicates feeling across a whole group. This is the card of friendship, shared intention, and collaborating on something genuinely captivating. It reflects the ease of being around people who speak your language and understand you instantly. Its abundance comes specifically from shared experience, the wealth that only community, not solitude, can generate.

Reversed / shadow: Overindulgence, gossip, or feeling like an outsider to the group.

Anonymized: Where one energy discovers emotion in a single relationship, a communicative one here shares feeling across a whole group. This is the card of friendship, shared intention, and collaborating on something genuinely captivating. It reflects the ease of being around people who speak your language and understand you instantly. Its abundance comes specifically from shared experience, the wealth that only community, not solitude, can generate.

Original: Mercury brings the communication of emotions, whereas with Venus we had the discovery of emotions in a relationship with another. Here, we deeply communicate with many people. It is the card of sisterhood, friendship, sharing intentions, planning together and working on something that truly captivates us. We share the same language, which is what happens when we are surrounded by like-minded people, friends like us, with whom we share mutual understanding upon first glance. It is a card related to abundance, the wealth that comes only from shared experience.

Four of Cups [minor_cups_04] — MOON IN CANCER, THIRD DECAN

Upright, condensed (63w): The Moon is at home in Cancer here, deepening feeling and the need for protection and inner retreat. Cancer's pull toward memory, nostalgia, and unrealized daydreams can tip into missing what's actually being offered right now, symbolized by the cup being handed over unnoticed. This card is a signal to check where emotional stagnation might be causing you to overlook a present opportunity.

Reversed / shadow: Apathy either finally breaking, or deepening into full withdrawal from what's offered.

Anonymized: A reflective, emotional planetary energy is at home in a nurturing sign here, deepening feeling and the need for protection and inner retreat. That sign's pull toward memory, nostalgia, and unrealized daydreams can tip into missing what's actually being offered right now, symbolized by a cup being handed over unnoticed. This card is a signal to check where emotional stagnation might be causing you to overlook a present opportunity.

Original: The Moon in Cancer is in its right position, its home. It represents the emotional world, the depth of feeling, which encounters home, the need for protection, and one's inner world in Cancer. The Moon is yin energy: feminine, mutable, receptive. In this card, we find the Moon's tendency in Cancer to remain in touch with the past, memories, nostalgia, or with daydreaming and desires that haven't yet been realized. This tendency can lead us to lose what we have in the present, whether it's an opportunity, something new or a new beginning, which is represented on the card by the cup that is handed over to the figure. When we encounter this card, we must pay attention to things that have become emotionally stagnant in our lives.

Five of Cups [minor_cups_05] — MARS IN SCORPIO, FIRST DECAN

Upright, condensed (67w): Scorpio's fixed water controls emotion to reach the heart of things, meeting Mars's warrior energy of action and resolution here. A figure stares at three spilled, empty cups, echoing the abundance once shown in the Three of Cups, while two full cups stand untouched behind them. The card lingers on loss the way Scorpio would, but Mars is present too, quietly pushing toward transforming pain into awareness.

Reversed / shadow: Starting to move past the loss, or refusing to release it at all.

Anonymized: A fixed water sign controls emotion to reach the heart of things, meeting a warrior-like, resolving energy here. A figure stares at three spilled, empty vessels, echoing an abundance shown elsewhere in this suit, while two full vessels stand untouched behind them. The card lingers on loss the way that fixed water sign would, but the warrior energy is present too, quietly pushing toward transforming pain into awareness.

Original: With the Five of Cups, we enter the world of Scorpio: a fixed water sign that represents the ability to control emotions in order to go deeper into the heart of a matter. Here, it meets Mars, a warrior planet of action and resolution. Upon first glance, its message seems hidden in the card, but it's not true. We see a figure who observes three cups that have fallen on the ground and emptied. As we have seen, the Three of Cups is abundance, sharing, something we have lost in this moment. Behind the figure there are two other full cups. The card speaks of lingering on a loss, as Scorpio would do. Mars is present in the action we don't see and is implied by the two full cups; that is, moving from discomfort to awareness, abandoning regret and transforming pain.

Six of Cups [minor_cups_06] — SUN IN SCORPIO, SECOND DECAN

Upright, condensed (63w): With the Sun illuminating Scorpio's tendency to preserve what it values, this card holds innocence, childhood, and everything worth protecting emotionally. It draws on feelings already known and trusted, encouraging us to cherish what once felt good and let that memory inspire the present. This is less about dwelling in the past than using it as a source of comfort and encouragement now.

Reversed / shadow: Nostalgia tipping into being stuck, unable to leave the past behind.

Anonymized: With a bright, illuminating energy meeting a tendency to preserve what it values, this card holds innocence, childhood, and everything worth protecting emotionally. It draws on feelings already known and trusted, encouraging us to cherish what once felt good and let that memory inspire the present. This is less about dwelling in the past than using it as a source of comfort and encouragement now.

Original: The Six of Cups is the card of innocence, childhood, and everything that we understand and know we must preserve at an emotional level. This is how Scorpio appears when the Sun is in its position. Scorpio tends to preserve what it knows is valuable. Therefore, the card recalls nostalgia, the memory of the happy past. The sign acts on emotions it already knows and values. They must be cherished and used as encouragement to find them in the present. It urges us to take care of what has made us feel good in the past and recognize that in the present to relive the same sensation.

Seven of Cups [minor_cups_07] — VENUS IN SCORPIO, THIRD DECAN

Upright, condensed (67w): Venus is in exile in Scorpio, turning love's goddess greedy for feeling, desire, and fantasy, wanting to taste everything the seven cups of wealth and success offer. The real theme here is illusion and choice: are we seeing clearly, or are we the ones creating the deception? Any decision here deserves careful evaluation rather than instinct, though pure, heartfelt desire can still point toward the right path.

Reversed / shadow: Illusions finally clearing, or choices avoided by staying lost in fantasy.

Anonymized: A loving planetary energy is somewhat out of its natural element in a deep, intense sign, turning it greedy for feeling, desire, and fantasy, wanting to taste everything the vessels of wealth and success in this scene offer. The real theme here is illusion and choice: are we seeing clearly, or are we the ones creating the deception? Any decision here deserves careful evaluation rather than instinct, though pure, heartfelt desire can still point toward the right path.

Original: Venus in Scorpio is in exile. Here, the goddess of love becomes greedy for feelings, desires, and dreams. She wants to try everything, just like the figure that stands before the seven cups that contain symbols of wealth and success. And yet the key to this card is illusion and choice, which dismiss Venus in the energy of Scorpio. We are victims of an illusion, and yet are we the one who is deceiving someone? Are we really observing the situation with clear eyes? This card holds a choice, which must be carefully evaluated and not instinctively chosen. At the same time, just as Venus would do when in Scorpio, we are reminded to dream and wish with a pure heart. Our true desire will point us in the right direction.

Eight of Cups [minor_cups_08] — SATURN IN PISCES, FIRST DECAN

Upright, condensed (62w): Pisces's expanding emotion meets Saturn's discipline around time and limits. A figure walks away from eight familiar cups toward unknown, wild territory, marking a moment when emotions have stagnated and the only real option is to leave. This card calls for abandoning old patterns and closing a cycle, embracing the number eight's shape as an infinity of ending folding into new beginning.

Reversed / shadow: Fear keeping you in a stagnant place long after it's stopped serving you.

Anonymized: An expansive, emotional sign meets a disciplined energy around time and limits. A figure walks away from familiar vessels toward unknown, wild territory, marking a moment when emotions have stagnated and the only real option is to leave. This card calls for abandoning old patterns and closing a cycle, embracing the shape of its number as an infinity of ending folding into new beginning.

Original: In this card, Pisces, which is expanding emotion, meets Saturn, the master of time and limits. We see a figure walking away, leaving eight cups in a familiar place before heading toward another place that is unknown and wild. The card tells us of a time in which our emotions have reached a stagnant phase from which all we can do is escape. It invites you to abandon old behaviors and leave your certainties behind, because what was before can no longer be. It is time for transformation, to close a cycle and begin a new journey, as the number of this card suggests: 8, or the infinity with end and beginning.

Nine of Cups [minor_cups_09] — JUPITER IN PISCES, SECOND DECAN

Upright, condensed (59w): Pisces's emotional depth meets Jupiter's expansion and fulfillment, making this the card of desires realized. If you want something, this card suggests it's already on its way. Nine, the number just before completion, holds a place of full, joyful anticipation rather than impatience, a sign that something genuinely good is close at hand and worth savoring in the meantime.

Reversed / shadow: Dissatisfaction despite having enough, or seeking fulfillment in excess instead.

Anonymized: A deep, emotional sign meets an expansive, fulfilling energy, making this the card of desires realized. If you want something, this card suggests it's already on its way. Sitting just before completion, it holds a place of full, joyful anticipation rather than impatience, a sign that something genuinely good is close at hand and worth savoring in the meantime.

Original: The Nine of Cups is the card of fulfilled desires. It can't be any other way since, here, Pisces, and thus the inner world, emotions and dreams, meet Jupiter, the planet of success, expansion and fulfillment. Pisces carries emotional depth and fullness that foretells the arrival of truly happy days. If we want something, here, we know it's about to happen. The cups are almost complete: Nine, the number before Ten, invites us to a place of full and joyous expectation, because we know that something beautiful is about to arrive.

Ten of Cups [minor_cups_10] — MARS IN PISCES, THIRD DECAN

Upright, condensed (59w): Mars's usually roaring energy finds calm here, anchored by Pisces's peace and harmony. This card reflects real satisfaction with what's been achieved, full presence, and everything settled comfortably in its place. The feeling is magnetic and grounding, elevating everyday life rather than chasing something bigger. It's simply a genuinely happy moment, worth noticing and enjoying rather than rushing past.

Reversed / shadow: A happy picture that doesn't match how disconnected things actually feel underneath.

Anonymized: A usually roaring, active energy finds calm here, anchored by a peaceful, harmonious sign. This card reflects real satisfaction with what's been achieved, full presence, and everything settled comfortably in its place. The feeling is magnetic and grounding, elevating everyday life rather than chasing something bigger. It's simply a genuinely happy moment, worth noticing and enjoying rather than rushing past.

Original: The emerging and roaring force of Mars, here, finds an anchor of peace and harmony in the sign of Pisces. In this card there is satisfaction for what we have achieved, awareness and attention to the present, where everything is in its place.

Emotional satisfaction is important when we encounter this card. The person often radiates a magnetic and rooting sense of peace. Personal vibrations are elevated, and it will be easy to bring joy to your life. It is a truly happy moment. Let us enjoy it.

Upright, condensed (62w): Air and Water combine here, inspiration mixed with feeling. The Page of Cups works to turn dreams into reality, marking the beginning of an exciting connection, whether with a person, a project, or an experience. Pure imagination and lightness rooted in genuine feeling define him. Tied to childhood and innocence, he carries the very first seed of an emerging love, still unfolding.

Reversed / shadow: Emotional immaturity, or idealizing a connection that isn't what it seems.

Anonymized: Air and Water combine here, inspiration mixed with feeling. This character works to turn dreams into reality, marking the beginning of an exciting connection, whether with a person, a project, or an experience. Pure imagination and lightness rooted in genuine feeling define them. Tied to childhood and innocence, they carry the very first seed of an emerging love, still unfolding.

Original: The Page of Cups represents the elements of Air and Water together. This means inspiration mixed with emotion. The Page of Cups is someone who works to make our dreams a reality. He is the beginning of an exciting journey, a new encounter, the first phase of falling in love, and not just with a person but also with a project, place, or experience. He is pure imagination, levity, beauty rooted in personal feeling. The Page of Cups is connected to childhood and purity and carries the seed of an emerging love.

Knight of Cups [minor_cups_knight] — FIRE OF WATER

Upright, condensed (60w): Water's romanticism meets Fire's passion in an unstable but powerful mix. This Knight can accomplish real things through love, often drawn to art, whether painting, photography, theater, or music. He offers genuine gentleness and warmth, but his fire can flare and fade quickly, making him inspiring yet unpredictable, someone who lives fully in both the emotional and the creative world.

Reversed / shadow: Charm without follow-through, or moodiness where steady warmth was expected.

Anonymized: Water's romanticism meets Fire's passion in an unstable but powerful mix. This character can accomplish real things through love, often drawn to art, whether painting, photography, theater, or music. They offer genuine gentleness and warmth, but their fire can flare and fade quickly, making them inspiring yet unpredictable, someone who lives fully in both the emotional and the creative world.

Original: The Knight of Cups moves between two opposing elements: the romanticism of the Water element and the passion of Fire. Although it is unstable, it can complete great missions through love. He is an inspiring person often tied to the world of arts: painting, photography, theater, music. The Knight of Cups lives in the world of art and love. He is capable of great gentleness and genuine warmth, even if he can be very unstable and mutable and his fire can quickly extinguish.

Queen of Cups [minor_cups_queen] — WATER OF WATER

Upright, condensed (54w): The Queen of Cups is pure Water, the emotional element in its fullest form. She loves without condition, listens with real sensitivity, and heals through empathy rather than advice. Pure of heart, she isn't swayed by others' judgments, because she sees straight through to the soul beneath them, meeting people exactly where they are.

Reversed / shadow: Compassion tipping into self-sacrifice, or overwhelm from absorbing too much feeling.

Anonymized: This character is pure Water, the emotional element in its fullest form. She loves without condition, listens with real sensitivity, and heals through empathy rather than advice. Pure of heart, she isn't swayed by others' judgments, because she sees straight through to the soul beneath them, meeting people exactly where they are.

Original: The Queen of Cups is the manifestation of the soul of Water. She can love unconditionally, is very sensitive and receptive, and knows how to listen and heal through empathy. She is pure of heart and doesn't let herself be influenced by the judgments of those she encounters, because she can see their soul.

King of Cups [minor_cups_king] — EARTH OF WATER

Upright, condensed (63w): The King of Cups grounds feeling through Earth, giving him real stability with emotion. Like the Queen of Cups, his listening itself transforms and heals others. Deeply connected to the arts, imagination is his defining power, but he has to stay alert, careful not to lose himself in daydreaming. His strength lies in staying centered and rooted even while working through deep feeling.

Reversed / shadow: Calm on the surface hiding real volatility, or feelings used to manipulate.

Anonymized: This character grounds feeling through Earth, giving him real stability with emotion. Like another figure known for the same suit, his listening itself transforms and heals others. Deeply connected to the arts, imagination is his defining power, but he has to stay alert, careful not to lose himself in daydreaming. His strength lies in staying centered and rooted even while working through deep feeling.

Original: The King of Cups offers stability in feeling through the Earth element. He knows how to control his emotions, so that they can become fertile ground for others as well. Like the Queen of Cups, he can listen, and his listening transforms and heals. He is connected to the world of the arts and uses imagination as his main power. That's why he must remain aware and not lose himself in daydreaming or yearning on emotions. He must remain firmly centered and rooted in his power.

Ace of Swords [minor_swords_ace] — GEMINI · LIBRA · AQUARIUS

Upright, condensed (67w): Like every Ace, this card is Air in its rawest form: sudden illumination, when a situation becomes completely clear. It's the ability to see things exactly as they are, cutting away anything unnecessary to reach what's essential. This can mean a new way of seeing something, or using reason without being pulled under by emotion. The sword separates truth from deceit, echoing Air's gift for honest communication.

Reversed / shadow: Clarity clouded, or truth getting tangled in confusion and misunderstanding.

Anonymized: Like every card of its kind, this one is Air in its rawest form: sudden illumination, when a situation becomes completely clear. It's the ability to see things exactly as they are, cutting away anything unnecessary to reach what's essential. This can mean a new way of seeing something, or using reason without being pulled under by emotion. A central symbol in this scene separates truth from deceit, echoing this element's gift for honest communication.

Original: The Ace of Swords, like all Aces, represents the primordial matter related to its element, in this case Air. It is the idea, illumination, when everything becomes clear suddenly and we have a clear view of the situation. It refers to the ability to see things as they are, to discern and eliminate the superfluous. The Ace of Swords cuts away the unnecessary to leave the essential. It can be a new vision of things, or it can refer to the ability to use our rational side without getting bogged down by the emotional. The Sword separates truth from deceit and often references the art of words and communication, just like Air signs.

Two of Swords [minor_swords_02] — MOON IN LIBRA, FIRST DECAN

Upright, condensed (59w): Hidden information here needs to be found within rather than outside. This secrecy reflects Libra's careful sensitivity, pausing to think before acting in order to restore inner balance. It's a card about searching and weighing options, the quiet needed to make a real decision. The Moon adds a sense of change, one that stabilizes through Libra's naturally harmonious energy.

Reversed / shadow: A decision avoided indefinitely, rather than the pause actually leading anywhere.

Anonymized: Hidden information here needs to be found within rather than outside. This secrecy reflects a balanced sign's careful sensitivity, pausing to think before acting in order to restore inner balance. It's a card about searching and weighing options, the quiet needed to make a real decision. A reflective planetary energy adds a sense of change, one that stabilizes through that sign's naturally harmonious energy.

Original: In the Two of Swords there is hidden information, secrets, which we must seek within ourselves. Secrecy is an expression of the sensitivity of Libra: pondering, thinking before acting, making a decision in order to restore balance and inner harmony. This is a card of searching, balancing, of the peace needed to make a choice. The Moon represents change, which stabilizes and is channeled through the harmonious energy of Libra.

Three of Swords [minor_swords_03] — SATURN IN LIBRA, SECOND DECAN

Upright, condensed (61w): After the careful decision of the Two, this card faces its sometimes painful consequences. Saturn's discipline meets Libra's emotional, beauty-seeking nature, an unusual but powerful pairing, since being in real relationship with the world means being willing to feel pain fully. Without that, we stay tied to old hurt. This card breaks something open precisely so integration and healing can follow.

Reversed / shadow: Old pain either finally releasing, or being reopened again and again.

Anonymized: After a careful decision made earlier, this card faces its sometimes painful consequences. A disciplined energy meets an emotional, beauty-seeking sign, an unusual but powerful pairing, since being in real relationship with the world means being willing to feel pain fully. Without that, we stay tied to old hurt. This card breaks something open precisely so integration and healing can follow.

Original: In the Two of Swords, we have made a careful decision, but in the Three of Swords we must face the consequences of our choice, which are sometimes painful. In this card, Saturn, the master of limits, regulation, and responsibility, meets Libra, which presides over emotions and beauty. Although it may seem strange, Saturn is in exaltation in Libra, because being in an emotional relationship with the world means listening, observing, accepting, and experiencing pain. Without this practice, it's not possible to overcome what hurts us. If we don't remember what made us suffer and we're not compassionate toward it, we'll always be tied to it. The Three of Swords therefore breaks in order to then integrate, wounds so that healing can take place.

Four of Swords [minor_swords_04] — JUPITER IN LIBRA, THIRD DECAN

Upright, condensed (62w): Jupiter, planet of expansion and also justice, meets the third decan of Libra, which seeks balance through relationship. After the difficulty of the Three, this card allows real healing: rest, an expanded view of things, and a fresh sense of harmony. This is compromise earned through crisis and awareness, and through rest and acceptance a new path opens under a luckier sky.

Reversed / shadow: Rest refused past the point of need, leading to exhaustion instead of recovery.

Anonymized: An expansive planetary energy, also linked to fairness, meets a balance-seeking sign here. After a prior difficulty, this card allows real healing: rest, an expanded view of things, and a fresh sense of harmony. This is compromise earned through crisis and awareness, and through rest and acceptance a new path opens under a luckier sky.

Original: Jupiter, the planet of expansion, growth, and possibilities, but also of justice (the god Jupiter was the protector of the courts), here meets the third decan of Libra, the one who seeks balance through relationships. In the Four of Swords, after the difficulty encountered in the Three of Swords, we can finally heal. We can rest, expand our vision of things, as Jupiter teaches us, and find a new balance, a new inner harmony. It is compromise, which we achieve after a crisis and awareness. Through rest, being, and acceptance, we can start a new path, under the lucky star of Jupiter.

Five of Swords [minor_swords_05] — VENUS IN AQUARIUS, FIRST DECAN

Upright, condensed (62w): Aquarius's fixed nonconformity meets Venus, planet of love and exchange, here. Someone wins and someone loses in this card, though which role matters is left open, is it defeat, or victory at too high a cost? It echoes the Star, Aquarius's own Major Arcana card: even in loss, hope for something better shouldn't be abandoned. Aquarius challenges convention, whatever the immediate outcome.

Reversed / shadow: Resentment lingering after the fact, or conflict finally resolving into real reconciliation.

Anonymized: A fixed, nonconformist sign meets a loving, exchange-oriented energy here. Someone wins and someone loses in this card, though which role matters is left open, is it defeat, or victory at too high a cost? It echoes hope found elsewhere in this deck: even in loss, hope for something better shouldn't be abandoned. This energy challenges convention, whatever the immediate outcome.

Original: In the Five of Swords, we meet the first decan of the sign of Aquarius: fixed sign, characterized by nonconformity, vision, the ability to challenge the limits of common belief. Here the sign is accompanied by Venus, the planet of love, relationship, and exchange. In the Five of Swords, someone wins and someone loses: we do not know which of the two roles is of interest to whoever is reading the card. Defeat or victory at great cost? This seems to be the question Aquarius poses to society as a whole through its nonconformist actions. It is a card of passage, which contains an echo of the Star (the Major Arcana card linked to the sign of Aquarius): if we are defeated, we cannot lose faith or hope in a better world.

Six of Swords [minor_swords_06] — MERCURY IN AQUARIUS, SECOND DECAN

Upright, condensed (58w): Aquarius's intellectual, communicative nature pairs naturally with Mercury, both oriented toward speed and exchange of ideas. This card traces a journey from an unsettled place toward calmer shores, a movement only possible through trust. As with the previous card, defeat is just a transition; here, moving forward means shifting from an old, rigid idea toward something genuinely new.

Reversed / shadow: Stuck mid-transition, resisting the very shift that would bring relief.

Anonymized: An intellectual, communicative sign pairs naturally with a quick, exchange-oriented energy, both oriented toward speed and exchange of ideas. This card traces a journey from an unsettled place toward calmer shores, a movement only possible through trust. As with a difficult card before it, defeat is just a transition; here, moving forward means shifting from an old, rigid idea toward something genuinely new.

Original: The sign of Aquarius, as a fixed Air sign, is very much oriented toward communication and intellectual relationship with others, and Mercury is also a master of the world of speed, messages, and intellectual exchange. In this card, the communicative and revolutionary energy of Aquarius and Mercury meet, outlining a journey from an unsafe, or difficult, place to a calm shore. The journey can only be made through trust. Just like in the previous card (defeat is only a transition, thanks to hope), here too movement is only possible if we trust. The paradigm shift cannot be only physical, but also moves from an old, preconceived and conformist idea to a new one, a new vision, a new possibility.

Seven of Swords [minor_swords_07] — MOON IN AQUARIUS, THIRD DECAN

Upright, condensed (61w): Linked to the Moon's connection with the High Priestess, this card turns Aquarius's communication inward, becoming gentle, hidden, and cunning rather than direct. Thoughts need time to gestate before being revealed, requiring tact rather than immediate disclosure. Though sometimes read as deception, it's more interesting as a quiet, magical card about the discipline of waiting for the right moment to act.

Reversed / shadow: A hidden strategy getting exposed, or honesty finally surfacing after too much secrecy.

Anonymized: Linked to a reflective energy's connection with a receptive figure elsewhere in this deck, this card turns a sign's communication inward, becoming gentle, hidden, and cunning rather than direct. Thoughts need time to gestate before being revealed, requiring tact rather than immediate disclosure. Though sometimes read as deception, it's more interesting as a quiet, magical card about the discipline of waiting for the right moment to act.

Original: The Moon, connected to the High Priestess card (and not the Moon card), is related to emotions, to listening, a gestation period. This is where Aquarius and its communication skills become inner, gentle, hidden. The divergent thinking of Aquarius is transformed into cunning, intelligence, an ability to think outside the box. With the Moon, communication is not immediate, but it is necessary to wait before revealing all the cards. You must act carefully, using tact. The card is often associated with thieves, but it is more interesting to read it as a silent card, full of magic and creative power, the ability to wait for the right moment.

Eight of Swords [minor_swords_08] — JUPITER IN GEMINI, FIRST DECAN

Upright, condensed (62w): A figure stands stuck and blindfolded here, an odd image for Jupiter, planet of expansion. But Jupiter is in exile in Gemini, opposite its home sign, so Gemini's quick, curious thinking turns against itself instead of expanding outward. This card warns that overthinking and over-communicating can become their own trap. The obstruction is self-made, and so is the freedom to release it.

Reversed / shadow: Either breaking free of a self-made trap, or sinking deeper into feeling powerless.

Anonymized: A figure stands stuck and blindfolded here, an odd image for an energy usually about expansion. But that energy is somewhat out of its natural element in a quick-thinking sign, so that sign's curious thinking turns against itself instead of expanding outward. This card warns that overthinking and over-communicating can become their own trap. The obstruction is self-made, and so is the freedom to release it.

Original: In the Eight of Swords, it seems strange to see a person stuck, blindfolded and unable to move. The card is associated with Jupiter, which is the planet of expansion, success, and growth. So why do we find this sense of closure? Here, Jupiter, since he is in Gemini, is in exile (this means that Jupiter is in the opposite sign to the one in which he has his home, Sagittarius). Therefore, the rapid, passionate, and curious thought of the sign is exalted through its less easy aspects. The Eight of Swords tells us that thinking too much, talking too much, and communicating too much can sometimes be an obstacle, can limit the full expression of ourselves. Let's not let our thoughts overwhelm or limit us. If and when it happens, we will be the ones to allow it.

Nine of Swords [minor_swords_09] — MARS IN GEMINI, SECOND DECAN

Upright, condensed (64w): A figure wakes from what looks like a nightmare, nine sharp swords behind her, evoking anxiety and inner conflict. Mars's passionate intensity meets Gemini's rational, communicative Air here, mind and heart colliding directly. The card's real comfort is a reminder that things are rarely as dire as they seem in the dark. Morning light dissolves the shadows, if we're willing to look again objectively.

Reversed / shadow: Anxiety finally easing with perspective, or spiraling further without it.

Anonymized: A figure wakes from what looks like a nightmare, sharp blades behind her, evoking anxiety and inner conflict. A passionate, intense energy meets a rational, communicative sign here, mind and heart colliding directly. The card's real comfort is a reminder that things are rarely as dire as they seem in the dark. Morning light dissolves the shadows, if we're willing to look again objectively.

Original: The figure we find in the Nine of Swords is not reassuring: a person wakes up, seemingly from a nightmare, in the darkness of the night, and behind her there are nine sharp swords. This is the card of anxiety, paranoia and inner conflict. We could say that the physical and manifested characteristics of Mars, passionate creator, are found here, as well as the trait of Gemini, an Air sign, aimed at thinking rationally, communicating clearly and objectively. The mind and heart meet and clash. However, we just have to remember that things are not as bad as they appear, to open the window in the morning to let in new light and let the shadows dissolve. It's time to reconsider the situation objectively.

Ten of Swords [minor_swords_10] — SUN IN GEMINI, THIRD DECAN

Upright, condensed (68w): This card falls in Gemini's third decan, ending right at the summer solstice, the Sun's own festival. A figure lies pierced by ten blades, an image that seems at odds with Gemini's bright energy, until you see the message: a cycle has fully ended, and clarity is needed to celebrate the dawn that follows. The Sun in Gemini says let go of the old to welcome the light.

Reversed / shadow: Resisting an ending that's already occurred, delaying the recovery that follows.

Anonymized: This card falls at the very end of a communicative sign's cycle, ending right at a seasonal turning point tied to a bright, radiant energy's own festival. A figure lies pierced by several blades, an image that seems at odds with that sign's usual brightness, until you see the message: a cycle has fully ended, and clarity is needed to celebrate the dawn that follows. Let go of the old to welcome the light.

Original: The Ten of Swords card falls in the third decan of Gemini, the period that ends on June 21, the summer solstice and the festival of the Sun. Here, in the Ten of Swords, we see a person pierced by ten blades, lying on the ground. This doesn't seem to have much to do with the sparkling energy of Gemini or the Sun. But the association attributed by the Golden Dawn is perfect for this card: a cycle has ended, and we must have the ability and clarity to celebrate a new dawn. The Sun in Gemini does just that: it tells us to let go of the old, to let in the light, the lightness of a new beginning.

Upright, condensed (64w): Pure Air, the Page of Swords personifies communication itself: processing information quickly and delivering unexpected news or an important message. Often pictured high on a mountain, close to the sky, he's a natural student and investigator, drawn to research and mental inquiry. One foot stays on the ground though, a reminder that even a mind this active still needs to stay rooted in reality.

Reversed / shadow: Scattered thinking or gossip, rather than a message received clearly.

Anonymized: Pure Air, this character personifies communication itself: processing information quickly and delivering unexpected news or an important message. Often pictured high on a mountain, close to the sky, they're a natural student and investigator, drawn to research and mental inquiry. One foot stays on the ground though, a reminder that even a mind this active still needs to stay rooted in reality.

Original: The Page of Swords is the personification of the Air element: it is communication, the power of the mind to assimilate and process information, the ability to use words and carry quick messages. The Page of Swords is very good at quick communication. He brings an important message, unexpected news. Often represented on top of a mountain, he is very close to the sky. His proximity to the Air element tells us that thinking is his natural habitat and that he must be careful not to be overwhelmed by thoughts, to avoid mental exhaustion. He is a student, an investigator, a person who is passionate about research and mental inquiry. One of his feet rests on the ground, as if to remind us that to maintain balance, the mind must be rooted in reality.

Knight of Swords [minor_swords_knight] — FIRE OF AIR

Upright, condensed (66w): Fire meets Air here, a combination that can be explosive or, handled well, can light a warm and useful fire. This Knight turns ideas into action, so the real question this card raises is whether that combination is balanced: is the situation constructive or destructive, strategic or purely driven by passion? Focused on his goal, he still needs to stay aware of what's happening around him.

Reversed / shadow: Sharp thinking turned reckless, acting or speaking before the plan is ready.

Anonymized: Fire meets Air here, a combination that can be explosive or, handled well, can light a warm and useful fire. This character turns ideas into action, so the real question this card raises is whether that combination is balanced: is the situation constructive or destructive, strategic or purely driven by passion? Focused on their goal, they still need to stay aware of what's happening around them.

Original: The Knight of Swords is a variation of Fire, the element of all Knights, with the Air element: we know how explosive the combination of these two elements can be, but also how effective it is when we want to light a warm and welcoming fire. The Knight of Swords is therefore the action (Fire) that is processed by the mind, by ideas (Air). This card carries both elements, so when we encounter it, we must ask ourselves if they are balanced or not: is the situation constructive or destructive? Can we have a clear strategy, or are we only dragged on by passion? The Knight of Swords seems focused on his goal, but he must also pay attention to his surroundings, remembering the importance of integrating these two aspects.

Queen of Swords [minor_swords_queen] — WATER OF AIR

Upright, condensed (70w): Water and Air combine in the Queen of Swords, letting her shape ideas through empathy and compassion rather than cold logic alone. Often linked to the butterfly, a symbol of transformation, she turns emotion into lucid, direct, and sincere thought. Her wisdom comes from experience, letting her weigh a situation from multiple angles and choose what's truly real. Like her sword, she cuts, but she also knows what's worth preserving.

Reversed / shadow: Honesty turned cold or cutting, missing the compassion that usually tempers it.

Anonymized: Water and Air combine in this character, letting her shape ideas through empathy and compassion rather than cold logic alone. Often linked to a symbol of transformation, she turns emotion into lucid, direct, and sincere thought. Her wisdom comes from experience, letting her weigh a situation from multiple angles and choose what's truly real. Like the tool she carries, she cuts, but she also knows what's worth preserving.

Original: The Queen of Swords mixes the element of Water, that of all Queens, with the element of Air, which belongs to the Sword suit. She is able to shape ideas through empathy, listening and compassion. She is often associated with the butterfly, a symbol of transmutation. The Queen of Swords is able to transform emotions into lucid thought, through which she observes reality, which is ironic, sharp, direct, sincere, free. She is an expression of wisdom, a person who has made a long journey to get here. She knows how to analyze situations from various points of view and choose those that adhere most to reality. Like her sword, she can cut, but can also discern and preserve what is truly essential.

King of Swords [minor_swords_king] — EARTH OF AIR

Upright, condensed (65w): The King of Swords channels sharp intellect through the steadying influence of Earth. A natural strategist and communicator, he finds unexpected solutions to problems that seem impossible to untangle. His advice is to think outside familiar patterns and gain distance for a clearer view; from above, the whole situation is easier to read. When this card appears, it's worth listening to someone lucid and trustworthy.

Reversed / shadow: Strategy turned rigid or manipulative, intellect used to dominate rather than clarify.

Anonymized: This character channels sharp intellect through the steadying influence of Earth. A natural strategist and communicator, he finds unexpected solutions to problems that seem impossible to untangle. His advice is to think outside familiar patterns and gain distance for a clearer view; from above, the whole situation is easier to read. When this card appears, it's worth listening to someone lucid and trustworthy.

Original: The King of Swords uses the energy of the Earth to channel and root his great intellectual capacity. He is a communicator, a strategist, the one who knows how to find unexpected solutions to problems that seem insurmountable. He advises us to think in an alternative way and to not be caged by usual mental schemes. Let's find space, fly high, because from above we have a better view of the situation. From the King of Swords, we can also learn the right amount of detachment, which is necessary to evaluate a problematic situation and to identify possible solutions. If this card appears in a reading, it is probably worth listening to the advice of a trusted and lucid person.

Ace of Pentacles [minor_pentacles_ace] — TAURUS · VIRGO · CAPRICORN

Upright, condensed (66w): Pentacles belong to Earth, representing stability, material goods, and everything that nourishes and takes real form. This card opens the door to new possibility in work, finances, or personal satisfaction, tied to self-care and protecting your own boundaries. Like a seed breaking through dark soil, the opportunity here needs to be actively seized rather than left waiting, since an Ace is only ever a starting point.

Reversed / shadow: An opportunity missed or poorly planned, rather than seized while it's fresh.

Anonymized: This suit belongs to Earth, representing stability, material goods, and everything that nourishes and takes real form. This card opens the door to new possibility in work, finances, or personal satisfaction, tied to self-care and protecting your own boundaries. Like a seed breaking through dark soil, the opportunity here needs to be actively seized rather than left waiting, since a card like this one is only ever a starting point.

Original: The Pentacle suit is related to the Earth element and refers to stability, material goods, everything that nourishes, defines and materializes. To encounter this card means to open up to new possibilities, to fruitful beginnings in the sphere of work, finances, and even personal satisfaction. It is a card that is associated with self-care, the protection of one's boundaries, the ability to break through, as a seed does under dark soil. The card shows us an opportunity—as is always the case with Aces; it's up to us to seize it or not.

Two of Pentacles [minor_pentacles_02] — JUPITER IN CAPRICORN, FIRST DECAN

Upright, condensed (63w): This card is about finding balance across the ordinary demands of daily life, commitments, relationships, finances, and work all at once. Jupiter, lord of growth and luck, meets Capricorn's discipline and hard work here, an interesting combination of expansion and restraint. Paying attention to how these two pulls alternate through your days, rather than favoring one, is what brings genuine satisfaction and wellbeing.

Reversed / shadow: Overwhelm from too many demands at once, balance tipping into chaos.

Anonymized: This card is about finding balance across the ordinary demands of daily life, commitments, relationships, finances, and work all at once. A lucky, growth-oriented energy meets a disciplined, hardworking sign here, an interesting combination of expansion and restraint. Paying attention to how these two pulls alternate through your days, rather than favoring one, is what brings genuine satisfaction and wellbeing.

Original: The Two of Pentacles card refers to each person's ability to find balance in daily life between commitments, private matters, fun, relationships, finances, and work. Interestingly, this card features Jupiter, lord of growth, expansion, and luck, and Capricorn, whose energy relates to hard work, commitment, and the ability to set limits. Finding them together here means that we must pay attention to these different inclinations, which can alternate in our days. The balance between these two poles will bring satisfaction and well-being.

Three of Pentacles [minor_pentacles_03] — MARS IN CAPRICORN, SECOND DECAN

Upright, condensed (61w): This card carries the energy of building something real, staying focused long enough to actually finish what's been started. Mars's timely action pairs with Capricorn's orderly, tenacious determination, giving you the tools to keep developing the idea planted by the Ace of Pentacles without wasting effort. It can also point to teamwork, a group pooling different skills toward one shared result.

Reversed / shadow: Misaligned effort or poor teamwork, progress stalling instead of building.

Anonymized: This card carries the energy of building something real, staying focused long enough to actually finish what's been started. A timely, active energy pairs with an orderly, tenacious sign's determination, giving you the tools to keep developing an idea planted earlier without wasting effort. It can also point to teamwork, a group pooling different skills toward one shared result.

Original: The Three of Pentacles has within it the energy of construction, the realization of a project, and the ability to maintain the right focus over time, to accomplish what we have set out to do. Here, Mars, planet of action and timeliness, matches Capricorn's tendency to work in an orderly, determined, and tenacious manner. In this card, we have all the tools to continue the project that is proposed to us in the Ace of Pentacles, avoiding wasted energy. The card can also refer to teamwork, a group effort in which everyone collaborates with their skills to achieve the final result.

Four of Pentacles [minor_pentacles_04] — SUN IN CAPRICORN, THIRD DECAN

Upright, condensed (62w): This card carries two intertwined meanings. As the number four, it represents stability and foundation, the ability to protect yourself and what you've built. But paired with Capricorn's earthy nature and the Sun's presence there, it also hints at possible rigidity, a structure held too tightly. The lesson is to build solid ground first, then stay open to what lies beyond it.

Reversed / shadow: Rigid over-attachment to control, or the opposite: instability from holding onto nothing.

Anonymized: This card carries two intertwined meanings. As a card of its particular number, it represents stability and foundation, the ability to protect yourself and what you've built. But paired with an earthy sign's nature and a bright energy's presence there, it also hints at possible rigidity, a structure held too tightly. The lesson is to build solid ground first, then stay open to what lies beyond it.

Original: The Four of Pentacles contains two different meanings, which combine to best explain the complexity of this card. On the one hand, it's connected to the number four, which symbolizes stability and foundations. Here we find the ability to take care of ourselves, our personal boundaries, and what we have. On the other hand, the card indicates a certain rigidity, a structure that is typical of an Earth sign like Capricorn (and the Sun in this sign). The Four of Pentacles teaches us that it is necessary to have a good foundation and that, once we have acquired our structure, we should not be afraid to open ourselves to the outside and to new possibilities.

Five of Pentacles [minor_pentacles_05] — MERCURY IN TAURUS, FIRST DECAN

Upright, condensed (62w): Mercury, all speed and connection, slows down considerably inside earthy, patient Taurus. As with most Fives, this card marks a recalibration after the stability of Four, here showing up as material loss, hunger, and depleted energy. Its real message is that isolation isn't necessary: asking for help and showing vulnerability is allowed. Turning inward at this moment can also reveal unexpected resources.

Reversed / shadow: Recovery finally beginning, or refusing help that's actually within reach.

Anonymized: A fast, connective energy slows down considerably inside an earthy, patient sign. As with most cards of this number, this card marks a recalibration after a prior stability, here showing up as material loss, hunger, and depleted energy. Its real message is that isolation isn't necessary: asking for help and showing vulnerability is allowed. Turning inward at this moment can also reveal unexpected resources.

Original: In the Five of Pentacles card, Mercury, which is communication, interconnection, and speed, is in Taurus, an Earth sign characterized by longer time frames. Also, in the Minor Arcana, five represents a challenge, an exercise in recalibration after the stability of four. This card marks a moment of loss, of difficulty even on a material level: we lack the right nourishment, we feel hungry, tired, without energy. Before the Five of Pentacles, we must remember that we are not alone: we can ask for help, show our vulnerability, and manifest our needs. Moreover, in this card we can find the suggestion of new contact with our inner world. We can often find unexpected resources there.

Six of Pentacles [minor_pentacles_06] — MOON IN TAURUS, SECOND DECAN

Upright, condensed (64w): The Moon's emotional, intuitive pull meets Taurus's grounded material stability here, producing a slower, less reactive response to need than fierier signs would give. This card is fundamentally about generosity, the give and take of resources. It asks an honest question: right now, are you the one giving too much until you're depleted, or the one who needs to finally accept what you're owed?

Reversed / shadow: Generosity with strings attached, or an imbalance between giving and receiving.

Anonymized: A reflective, intuitive energy meets a grounded, material sign here, producing a slower, less reactive response to need than fierier signs would give. This card is fundamentally about generosity, the give and take of resources. It asks an honest question: right now, are you the one giving too much until you're depleted, or the one who needs to finally accept what you're owed?

Original: The Six of Pentacles is related to the Moon in Taurus. The Moon is connected to emotions, intuition, to the most internal and sensitive part of the individual, whereas Taurus is the expression of material security, stability, rooted in the here-and-now. Taurus and the Moon speak of generosity: the ability to give and to share resources. In fact, the response of Taurus to their needs is slower, less reactive than that of Aries, the sign that precedes it: it is linked to listening to their emotional side, intuition. This card also speaks of the possibility of receiving: how many times have we had a need, but we have not taken what we deserved? And how many times have we given too much, to the point of draining our resources? The Six of Pentacles asks us to understand whether, in this moment, we are takers or givers.

Seven of Pentacles [minor_pentacles_07] — SATURN IN TAURUS, THIRD DECAN

Upright, condensed (67w): A figure often appears here tending seeds already sown, simply waiting for them to bear fruit. Saturn brings hard work and reflection that only pays off after patience, while Taurus knows how to wait for the right moment before enjoying what's been cultivated. This card asks whether you're truly willing to be patient for the reward, since now is the time to let things run their course.

Reversed / shadow: Impatience derailing the wait, or giving up just before things bear fruit.

Anonymized: A figure often appears here tending seeds already sown, simply waiting for them to bear fruit. A disciplined energy brings hard work and reflection that only pays off after patience, while a grounded sign knows how to wait for the right moment before enjoying what's been cultivated. This card asks whether you're truly willing to be patient for the reward, since now is the time to let things run their course.

Original: In the Seven of Pentacles we often meet a figure who has sown the seeds and is now waiting for the plant, which she has taken care of, to bloom and bear fruit. Indeed, here Saturn instills a tendency to hard work, reflection, and reward, but only at the end of a demanding process. Likewise, Taurus represents the ability to wait, to do things at the right time, and to enjoy, finally, what we have sown. The card often emphasizes waiting: are we really willing to be patient to enjoy the fruits of our labor? Now is the time to do so; we must let things take their course.

Eight of Pentacles [minor_pentacles_08] — SUN IN VIRGO, FIRST DECAN

Upright, condensed (65w): Virgo shows up here in its fullest form, embodying daily practice, careful attention to detail, and skilled handiwork. This card favors getting to work, focusing on craft, and repeating small actions until mastery follows naturally. It's the card of the apprentice, someone who keeps the bigger picture in view while patiently refining their skill. This is a moment to devote yourself fully to your craft.

Reversed / shadow: Focus scattered into sloppy work, or perfectionism that never lets the work be done.

Anonymized: A grounded sign shows up here in its fullest form, embodying daily practice, careful attention to detail, and skilled handiwork. This card favors getting to work, focusing on craft, and repeating small actions until mastery follows naturally. It's the card of the apprentice, someone who keeps the bigger picture in view while patiently refining their skill. This is a moment to devote yourself fully to your craft.

Original: In the Eight of Pentacles, we find the figure of the sign of Virgo in its full essence. The card shows us the importance of daily work, attention to detail, and manual skills; and the ability to observe and repeat. In addition to this, the card suggests the healthy disposition of getting to work, taking care of material action, and craft. It is the card of the apprentice, who—with study, application, and the ability to focus on detail without losing the big picture—becomes a master of the art day after day. This is the time to devote ourselves to our skills and to maintain focus.

Nine of Pentacles [minor_pentacles_09] — VENUS IN VIRGO, SECOND DECAN

Upright, condensed (61w): Venus, strongly tied to the Empress, meets Virgo's careful, daily devotion here, blending harmony and beauty with patient cultivation. A woman rests in her own garden, finally enjoying what she's long tended. This is a card of independence: savoring what you've achieved without needing anyone else's support, Venus giving Virgo the rare permission to simply enjoy the fruit of sustained effort.

Reversed / shadow: Reward earned but never enjoyed, or independence traded for relying on others.

Anonymized: A loving planetary energy, tied elsewhere in this deck to nurturing and abundance, meets a grounded sign's careful, daily devotion here, blending harmony and beauty with patient cultivation. A figure rests in their own garden, finally enjoying what they've long tended. This is a card of independence: savoring what you've achieved without needing anyone else's support, a rare permission to simply enjoy the fruit of sustained effort.

Original: In this card, we meet Venus, which is strongly connected to the Major Arcana card of the Empress. Harmony, beauty and pleasure are intertwined here with the message of Virgo, related to care, daily work, and attention to small things. In the card, a woman is in her garden. It seems that she is enjoying a moment of rest. The card suggests that we can finally enjoy what we have long cultivated, because it is now bearing fruit. A card of independence, the ability to savor what we have achieved, without relying on the support of anything, Venus gives the Virgo sign the ability to fully savor the fruits of our labor.

Ten of Pentacles [minor_pentacles_10] — MERCURY IN VIRGO, THIRD DECAN

Upright, condensed (62w): Mercury is at home in Virgo here, letting its gift for communication flourish through Virgo's organized, rational nature. This card holds wealth and generosity as both inner and outer qualities, bringing security and serenity to home, family, and work. It's closely tied to gratitude, the satisfaction that draws in further blessings, and to the inherited joy passed down through generations of belonging.

Reversed / shadow: Stability shaken, or abundance taken for granted instead of appreciated.

Anonymized: A communicative energy is at home in a grounded sign here, letting its gift for communication flourish through that sign's organized, rational nature. This card holds wealth and generosity as both inner and outer qualities, bringing security and serenity to home, family, and work. It's closely tied to gratitude, the satisfaction that draws in further blessings, and to the inherited joy passed down through generations of belonging.

Original: In the Ten of Pentacles, we encounter abundance, wealth, and generosity, both as inner and outer qualities. Mercury in Virgo is in its home position. This means that it is an excellent position for the planet, and that the organizational, essential, and rational capacity of Virgo can make the talents of Mercury, related to communication and interconnection, flourish. The card expresses security, stability, and serenity toward our home, our family, and our work. It pushes us to recognize the riches we already possess. It is closely linked to gratitude, that feeling of well-being and satisfaction that attracts new blessings like a magnet to the family, a tribe of belonging. It also represents the legacy of joy and wonder that we can receive from our ancestors, in a continuum of abundance.

Upright, condensed (61w): Air's intellectual curiosity interweaves with Earth's slow, careful pace in the Page of Pentacles, the apprentice card above all others. This figure studies something new with genuine dedication, moving at a measured speed that honors every detail along the way. In his grounded, earthy form, he reminds us that enjoying the process itself matters more than rushing toward any particular outcome.

Reversed / shadow: Curiosity without follow-through, or procrastination instead of steady practice.

Anonymized: Air's intellectual curiosity interweaves with Earth's slow, careful pace in this character, the apprentice figure above all others. This figure studies something new with genuine dedication, moving at a measured speed that honors every detail along the way. In their grounded, earthy form, they remind us that enjoying the process itself matters more than rushing toward any particular outcome.

Original: The Page of Pentacles has within him the characteristics of the Air element, which are interwoven with those of the Earth element. Intellectual capacity, mental speed, and the desire to learn are mixed with the need to move slowly and accurately, applying great importance to every detail. For this reason, the card of the Page of Pentacles is the card of the apprentice par excellence. The apprentice is studying a new subject, learning a new art, and is firmly dedicated to their work. The Page of Pentacles, in its earthly state, reminds us that the pleasure of the process is more important than the result itself.

Knight of Pentacles [minor_pentacles_knight] — FIRE OF EARTH

Upright, condensed (62w): The most careful of the four Knights, this figure lets Fire meet Earth, producing a measured pace attuned to the natural rhythm of things. Fully dedicated to his mission, he favors hard work and steady study over leisure, sometimes narrowing his focus to just one direction. What defines him is genuine willpower and constancy, exactly what's needed to accomplish something genuinely complex.

Reversed / shadow: Dedication tipping into stubborn stagnation, effort with no forward motion.

Anonymized: The most careful of the four figures at this rank, this character lets Fire meet Earth, producing a measured pace attuned to the natural rhythm of things. Fully dedicated to their mission, they favor hard work and steady study over leisure, sometimes narrowing their focus to just one direction. What defines them is genuine willpower and constancy, exactly what's needed to accomplish something genuinely complex.

Original: The Knight of Pentacles is the most attentive of the four knights of the Minor Arcana. This Fire here meets Earth and gives this knight a more measured movement, more connected to the natural pace of things. Here, we find a person totally dedicated to their mission. The attitude of this knight is linked to hard work and to study, which leaves little room for leisure. Here, the passionate fire is revealed, which can lead to focusing only in one direction. Of course, this knight has great willpower and constancy, which is necessary to accomplish complex goals.

Queen of Pentacles [minor_pentacles_queen] — WATER OF EARTH

Upright, condensed (65w): An embodiment of Mother Nature, the Queen of Pentacles blends Earth with Water into fertile ground, practical and responsive to whatever's needed. She feeds, nourishes, and finds real solutions within everyday life, her creativity showing wherever she can offer sustenance. She also practices real self-care, treating her body as sacred. Rooted and present, she experiences the world fully through the senses, just like the Empress.

Reversed / shadow: Self-care neglected while caring for everyone else, or nurturing that smothers.

Anonymized: An embodiment of Mother Nature, this character blends Earth with Water into fertile ground, practical and responsive to whatever's needed. She feeds, nourishes, and finds real solutions within everyday life, her creativity showing wherever she can offer sustenance. She also practices real self-care, treating her body as sacred. Rooted and present, she experiences the world fully through the senses, just like a nurturing figure found elsewhere in this deck.

Original: The Queen of Pentacles is an embodiment of Mother Nature. Her Earth mixes with Water, becoming fertile clay, soil for the seed, the ability to listen and respond practically to everyone's needs. She is the one who feeds, nourishes, and finds an immediate solution to the problems that arise, and she finds them in everyday life. Her creative ability shines when she can find something in any field to feed others. She is also the queen of self-care: she knows that her body is her temple, and she knows how to take care of it. Rooted, present, she radiates an earthly, centered strength. Just like the Empress, the Queen of Pentacles experiences the world through all the senses, and she is deeply in touch with them.

King of Pentacles [minor_pentacles_king] — EARTH OF EARTH

Upright, condensed (61w): The generous leader of the Minor Arcana, this King has reached real personal fulfillment through strong leadership. His wealth flows from a natural ability to share rather than hoard. Rooted fully in Earth, his wellbeing reflects real work and dedication rather than luck alone, giving him a stability that feels earned. He gives freely precisely because he already possesses genuine abundance.

Reversed / shadow: Generosity curdled into greed, or wealth valued over the people around it.

Anonymized: The generous leader among these court figures, this character has reached real personal fulfillment through strong leadership. His wealth flows from a natural ability to share rather than hoard. Rooted fully in Earth, his wellbeing reflects real work and dedication rather than luck alone, giving him a stability that feels earned. He gives freely precisely because he already possesses genuine abundance.

Original: Here is the generous leader of the Minor Arcana: the King of Pentacles, a person who has great leadership skills and has achieved an important position in life in terms of personal fulfillment. At the same time, he is also capable of great generosity. His abundance and wealth come from his innate ability to share and give. Precisely because we are in the sphere of the Earth element, we must remember that the well-being achieved by the King of Pentacles is the result of great work and great dedication, which have brought him to this position today. Satisfaction, well-being, and great wealth are the characteristics of the card, linked to a strong sense of stability and being rooted. The King of Pentacles knows how to give, precisely because he possesses great wealth.
